Parliamentary Tangle Sets New Precedent in Senate—No Break Seen in Near Future.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
Washington, January 13.—Out of a welter of votes, arguments and parliamentary tangles, the senate emerged tonight to find itself in exactly the same position with respect to Muscle Shoals that it was when the subject first was taken up six weeks ago.

Completing the three-point circle of measures on the subject, the legislators wound up with the once rejected Norris plan for government operation before them and the once approved Underwood private leasing bill again pending as a substitute.

Chronologically the events of the day were:

The Jones bill to refer the subject to a commission for a report as to final disposition was approved, 46 to 33, over the Underwood bill, which had been accepted last week over the Norris plan, 48 to 37.

The original Norris bill, in slightly amended form, then was accepted as a substitute for the Jones bill, 40 to 39.

Underwood Offers His Bill.
Senator Underwood then offered his bill in amended form as a substitute for the Norris measure and failing to have it ruled out on a point of order, supporters of the Norris plan renewed their assault upon it.

Finally the senate threw the whole subject aside until tomorrow and proceeded to the consideration of the first deficiency appropriation bill.

Irrespective of whether the Underwood bill is accepted or rejected, Senator Jones, republican, Washington, says he will offer his substitute amendment to it as to provide for a commission of five to investigate the project instead of a commission of three.

Circle Seems Endless.
Other leaders took a more optimistic view of the situation, however, predicting that the Underwood bill again would be substituted for the Norris measure and that then the amended Jones bill would be rejected.

Even should their prediction hold good, that would not be an end to the fight, for whatever measure emerges out of the present paralyzing situation in the senate, it still would be open to amendment and subject to a second and final approval.

This was agreed upon by leaders on all sides, but it was the only agreement that came out of the maze of confusion in which the senate found itself.

JOHN W. DAVIS
RE-ENTERS FORMER
BUSINESS FIELD

New York, January 13.—John W. Davis, democratic candidate for president in the last election, today was elected a director of the National Bank of Commerce, indicating a return to his former activities in the financial district.

The announcement of Mr. Davis' connection with the bank revived reports in Wall street that he planned to resume the various directorships he relinquished prior to entering the presidential campaign, notably his place on the board of the Atchafalaya, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad.

PUBLIC ACCIDENTS
FOR 1924 SHOW
GREAT DECREASE

Improvement in Conditions Largely Due to Constitution's Traffic Campaign, Deibert Says.

Public accidents in Atlanta decreased 40 per cent in 1924 as compared to 1923 according to figures made public Tuesday by the Atlanta Safety Council. This showing was made in the face of the fact that traffic congestion and the number of automobiles increased in rapid proportions while the city made substantial gains in population. There were 76 deaths from public accidents in 1924 as compared to 114 deaths from this cause the preceding year.

This marked improvement was due to an aroused public sentiment, the work of the Atlanta Safety Council and other agencies, and the vigorous campaign for safety waged by The Constitution during the year in which names of violators of traffic regulations were published according to officers engaged in handling the traffic situation.

Nearly 50 Per Cent Drop.
Vehicular accidents decreased almost fifty per cent during the year 1924 according to the figures. In that year 48 people were killed in accidents of this nature while 53 were killed under similar circumstances in 1923. The campaign of The Constitution to secure the release of the Wisconsin State Official and 10 Others Charged With 'Filibuster' at Progresso.

Madison, Wis., January 13.—Dr. W. F. Lorenz, president of the state board of control, widely-known physician and a war-time army major, is held in jail at Progresso, Mexico, together with 10 members of a Florida fishing schooner, charged with "filibuster or something equally absurd," according to a cable received from Lorenz.

Governor Blaine, of Wisconsin, making the cable public Tuesday evening, announced that he has asked the state department at Washington to secure the immediate release of Lorenz.

Governor Blaine has also wired President Calles, of Mexico, and the mayor of Progresso, asking freedom for the official.

Was on Fishing Trip.
Lorenz left Madison the day after Christmas for a fishing trip in the Gulf of Mexico. He sailed from Pensacola, Fla., in a schooner which carried a crew of 10 men. It is understood that Lorenz signed on as mate to make the trip, which included a period of fishing off the coast of Yucatan.

Mrs. Lorenz first received word from her husband that he was delayed in Progresso. Monday she received a cable saying that he would arrive in New Orleans on January 8. Tuesday, however, an associate of the official here received the cable from Progresso, dated the 13th, telling of his plight. The message read:

"Stilling, wrecked January 10. All hands saved. We are now in Mexican jail at Progresso charged with filibuster or something equally absurd."

Bishop Brown's Counsel Declares That Hedging Church With Creeds Is Not Catholic.

STATEMENT IS MADE IN HERESY APPEAL

Attorney and Trial Board Clash Over Interpretation of 'Resurrection of the Dead.'

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
Cleveland, January 13.—The catholicity of the Protestant Episcopal church in America, the origin and authenticity of the Nicene creed and the binding effect of the creeds upon the members of the church were discussed today in the opening argument of counsel for Bishop William Montgomery Brown, appealing from his conviction last May for heresy.

Joseph W. Sharps, of Dayton, chief counsel for the bishop, occupied the time of the church's board of review in the initial proceedings of the appeal. Tomorrow Charles Dibble, of Kalamazoo, Mich., church advocate, will argue for upholding the conviction by the trial court of bishops last May, after which Mr. Sharps will conclude the arguments. The final 15 minutes of the appeal, it was announced tonight, will be given over to a statement by Bishop Brown, in which he is expected to make a direct appeal to his fellow bishops for retention of his office in the church.

Only Partly Protestant.
The catholicity of the church was brought into the proceedings when Bishop J. Dewolfe Perry, of Rhode Island, asked Mr. Sharps for the latter's definition of "doctrine."

"Two theories of doctrine are presented to you in these proceedings," replied Mr. Sharps. "In one the prosecution contends that the church has formulated its doctrines in the words of the creeds. But we maintain that this is a Catholic church, protestant in only some of its aspects."

"If this church had formulated its doctrines in a set of words it would be a sect. We say doctrine is a bird that dies when caged and that while Catholicity provides catechisms and creeds, it delegates them to their proper place, constituting them as symbols of doctrine."

"This Catholic church we maintain has found its doctrine in holy scriptures and has refused to formulate them."

Quotes Creeds in Argument.
The attorney went on to illustrate by quoting the creeds as to the resurrection of the flesh.

"The creeds don't say that," interrupted Bishop C. B. Brewster, of Connecticut, another member of the court. "They speak of the resurrection of the body."

"Does that not mean flesh and bone?" asked Mr. Sharps.

Borah Confers With President But Accord on World Court Proposal Is Not Reached.

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER.

Washington, January 13.—After three days of excited speculation following the resignation of Secretary Hughes, the white house has acted to steady the boat by announcing that President Coolidge intends to follow the same foreign policies which the administration has hitherto pursued.

There is no substance to reports that Ambassador Kellogg's promotion to the state department means a change in our foreign policy, the president's spokesman said. Secretary Hughes has been in closer contact with the president than any other cabinet officer. There is no desire on the president's part, it was stated, to change materially the present policies. It was emphasized, however, that in the case of this government, as with other governments, changing circumstances necessitate developments in foreign policies. The president favors enlargement and development of American policies to meet new circumstances.

Borah Visits Coolidge.
In relation to Russia, it was pointed out that the Russian people have made progress since 1923, when the president fully stated his attitude on the subject of recognition in his message to congress. But the progress has not been as rapid as the president had hoped. He is still hopeful, however, that the Russian people will progress to a point where relations can be established. There was no indication that any development is imminent.

Senator Borah, chairman of the foreign relations committee, held an important conference with the president today. The subject was the entire situation with respect to foreign affairs. In view of the fact that Borah's influence is expected to be great now that Hughes is passing from the scene, this conference was attended by considerable interest.

Borah Retained.
Borah declined to comment on the conference. He still feels that Russia will be recognized eventually but was noncommittal regarding any definite action.

COUNCIL IS ASKED TO HELP SCHOOLS

Largest Amounts Requested of Finance Board at Meeting Tuesday Are for New Buildings.

With practically all requests from the public having been heard and needs of only about half a dozen departments to be presented, it is expected that the finance committee of city council will complete its public hearing today, and will be ready to go into executive session late this afternoon or early Thursday morning.

As on Monday, a large number of appropriations were requested of the committee, but no action was taken on any of them, and all will be considered when the body goes into executive session.

Requests for Schools.
The largest amounts asked by the public Tuesday were by delegations from the Davis Street and Highland Avenue schools. The city was asked to give $250,000 for construction of new buildings at each school, representatives of the Davis Street school claiming that the present wooden building is unsafe, while it is contended that a new unit is needed to provide adequate housing facilities for the Highland school.

A request was made that the city sell the fire engine house No. 2, located at 29 Washington street, to the Central Presbyterian church for $25,000. Members of the church, which adjoins the fire station, plan to extend the church if the property can be purchased from the city for the amount named. Dr. W. B. Duval, chairman, and other members of the committee, after hearing the requests and the recommendation of Fire Chief W. B. Cody that they be granted, indicated that the property probably will be sold to the church.

$1,194,780 for Waterworks.
W. Zode Smith, general manager of waterworks, presented his budget, showing that $1,194,780 will be necessary for operation of the department next year. He asked increases for several members of the department.

A large delegation of Luckie street property owners told the committee of the necessity of widening Luckie street, and outlined plans which would be submitted to the city council.

HUSTED EVIDENCE
IN ATHENS CASES
IS MADE PUBLIC

After Searching for Months He Found No Gambling Houses and Opened One Himself.

REPORTS SHOW WEST WAS MEMBER OF KLAN

Husted Says He Found Governor Walker Ready and Willing to Cooperate.

Athens, Ga., January 13.—(Special.)—On the eve of the trials of the 13 persons indicted by the Clarke county grand jury on charges of liquor-law violations, gaming and operating a gambling house, which are scheduled to come up in Clarke superior court tomorrow, before Judge Blanton Fortson, the evidence upon which the indictments were found was made public when the grand jury incorporated in their report a complete copy of the report of T. C. Husted, Ku Klux Klan investigator.

Husted was in Athens for the past four or five months conducting an "investigation" of law enforcement conditions here, acting under the orders of Rey. M. B. Miller, exalted cyclops, and a local Klan committee.

According to Husted's reports, he was unable to discover any gambling in Athens, with the exception of two occasions when he played in a private home, and in establishments which he had opened and operated himself.

His report, which is made in the form of a daily diary, tells how he migrated himself with men here who bore the reputation of being "sports" but admits that they all advised him against the operation of a gambling house for several months on the ground that it would not be "safe," and urged him to open his establishment outside of the city, and, in fact, in another county.

His report tells almost daily of visits he made to the "red light" district "over the river," and tells of almost daily purchases of liquor, most of which, however, were made in the Athens district or in the country several miles from the city.

According to Husted's report, on September 11 last he went to Atlanta in order to call on Governor Clifford Walker in reference to the Athens "cleanup" campaign. Reporting results of this visit he says:

Governor Willing.
"Dr. Miller, Mr. Ashley, Mr. and myself called on Governor Clifford Walker relative to getting financial support in carrying on a crusade for law and order in Athens. We found him ready and willing to cooperate with us in the cause."

This visit to Atlanta, according to Husted, was made several weeks after he had begun his operation in Athens. Referring to conditions in Athens

TWO WORLD FLIERS
TO VISIT ATLANTA

Lieutenants John Harding and Lowell Smith Accept Invitation of Atlanta Woman's Club.

The "world fliers" are coming to Atlanta. You've seen them in the news reels at the theaters, and read about them and talked about them, and marveled at their exploits, but never has Atlanta seen them in "flesh and blood."

According to announcements Tuesday night by the International Relations committee of the Atlanta Woman's club, Lieutenants John Harding and Lowell Smith, members of the memorable team of aviators who circled the globe, will arrive in Atlanta on March 13. The Woman's club extended an invitation to the two aviators, which they accepted, and they will arrive here in a government plane on that date.

Plans for the entertainment of the two celebrities have not yet been formulated. It was stated, however, that all military units of the city, including the R. O. T. C. department of Emory and Georgia Tech, would meet the two aviators upon their arrival and conduct them in parade through the streets of the city. Other plans will be announced at an early date, it was stated.

Morningside Park Citizens

SHAM BATTLE CALLS POLICE TO SCENE

BY KENNETH L. EAGON.
They sang "Help-Murder-Police!" in 17 minor strains out by Morningside park Tuesday night.

There were shots to the left of them, cannons to the right of them, bombs in front of them and dynamite in back of them. And on into the valley of sleep and peace crashed the 250.

Was it a battle?
It wasn't an altercation. Immediately after a terrific bombardment that sounded like they had repeated the Volstead act, exactly 87 frantic calls were received at Atlanta's police headquarters from the vicinity of the engagement at Morningside park.

"They're shooting up the city!" "Send all the cops in town."

"Rush out the ambulances. The dead are lying all over the park. They're jamming traffic."

And then Lieutenant of Police J. A. Scott took charge. But the lieutenant couldn't get what it was all about from anyone. All the excited and awed customers could relate was that they knew an army was advancing on Atlanta, that hundreds of shots already had been fired, and that the dead and wounded made Morningside Park look like a cockeyed puzzle.

Lieut. Scott summoned emergency policemen, filled all the riot cars owned by the police department and commanded others and rushed out to the intersection of Boulevard and Morningside drives—which point was

JOHN T. HANCOCK
REELECTED HEAD OF SCHOOL BOARD

Mrs. Julia O'Keefe Nelson Named First Vice President and A. C. Meixell Second Vice President.

John T. Hancock Tuesday afternoon was reelected president of the Atlanta board of education for 1925, and immediately took the chair to begin serving his second term. Mr. Hancock was elected by acclamation when no other board member was nominated.

Mr. Hancock, however, was the only 1924 official returned to office as Mrs. Julia O'Keefe Nelson, of the sixth ward, was named first vice president, and A. C. Meixell, of the ninth ward, was elected second vice president.

Praise for Hancock.
Mr. Hancock's name was placed in nomination by D. M. Therrell and was seconded by Mrs. Z. V. Peterson. Both told of the fine work done by the board president last year, and urged that he be reelected in order to assure carrying out the program started in 1924.

The 1925 president, after thanking board members, urged them to acquaint residents of their respective wards with the school situation, charging that the people of the city do not at present realize school needs and importance of the school financial problem, and have made no attempt to work out a solution.

Mrs. Nelson, who defeated W. C. Slate for vice president by a vote of 5 to 3, was nominated by Dr. R. M. Eubanks, while Mr. Slate, who held the office during 1924, was named by Mr. Therrell.

Mr. Meixell, new second vice president, was nominated by W. W. Gaines, and the name of his opponent, Mr. Therrell, was placed in nomination by Mr. Slate. The vote was 5 to 1. He succeeds Dr. Eubanks.

Board of Visitors.
All members of the board of visitors were reelected with exception of those from the first, fifth, seventh and ninth wards. Board members from the first, fifth and ninth wards were not present, and no nominations were made. It is expected, however, that all incumbents except one will be reelected.

Mr. Meixell, board member from the seventh ward, explained that Mrs. R. L. Thompson, member of the board of visitors from that ward, would be unable to serve next year.

The following members of the board of directors were reelected: Second ward, Mrs. B. V. Moore; Third ward, Mrs. C. P. Osburn; Fourth ward, Mrs. W. L. Shell; Sixth ward, Mrs. J. E. Haley; Eighth ward, Mrs. Ed Hooser; capital since January 5.

Leffer, the message stated, was a salesman for a Columbus, Ohio, chemical concern, and was reported to have left suddenly and without explanation for the south.

The description of the suicide and that furnished of Leffer by the Indianapolis persons interested, tally almost precisely, even to the fair complexion, pin-striped suit, shoes and brown felt hat.

Elks Making Search.
The Indianapolis dispatches asserted that Leffer was a prominent member of the Elks and that the Elks had started a nation-wide search for him.

Another coincidence is the fact that the mystery suicide registered at the hotel as "Lind," while the man missing from Indiana is Leffer, both names starting with the same letter, and sounding harmonious.

By use of a powerful magnifying glass, furnished by the Patterson mortuary, it was revealed that the suicide's two hats and a new pair of shoes recently were purchased from two well-known establishments in Indianapolis. The suicide had tried to obliterate these tell-tale marks but, obviously, had been under a nervous strain, for he failed to complete his work.

It is believed now that the man killed himself as the culmination of a period of brooding. He had not been drinking and there was every indication that he was sane.

PROTOCOL FREES

American Occupation Costs Get Priority in Cash Reparations Paid Under Dawes Plan.

U. S. IS RECOGNIZED AS DAWES PLAN PARTY

Plenary Session of Allied Finance Ministers' Conference Is Fixed for This Morning.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
Paris, January 13.—The protocol embodying the accord reached by the United States and Great Britain, together with the other powers, on the payment of the costs of the American army of occupation and war damage claims to the United States will be signed at a plenary session of the allied finance ministers' conference tomorrow morning.

The definite and final provisions include payments to the United States of 55,000,000 gold marks yearly, beginning September 1, 1926—this amount to apply on the occupation costs; the United States to share in the Dawes annuities at the rate of 2-1-4 per cent, beginning retroactively September 1, 1924—these payments to amortize the war damage claims, which will not exceed $350,000,000, immediately relate to the United States of the $14,725,154 now in the federal reserve bank, where it was deposited by the allies under the Wadsworth agreement.

U. S. Makes One Reservation.
The United States agrees to waive any claim under the Wadsworth agreement of May, 1923, and also agrees that the 2-1-4 per cent shall not apply on payments made on account of reparations by any former enemy power other than Germany.

The payments against the American occupation costs have priority in the cash payments of the Dawes annuities after the expenses of the inter-allied Rhineland commission, the inter-allied military control commission and the reparation commission have been paid. The United States makes an express reservation as follows:

The allied governments cannot insert any other item in the priority clause hereafter without the consent of the United States.

Has Interest in Dawes Funds.
One important item according to the American government is as follows:

"The United States is recognized as having an interest proportionate to its 2-1-4 per cent interest in that part of the annuities of the Dawes plan and also in the reparations in distribution of railway bonds, industrial debentures, or other bonds issued under the Dawes plan or in the proceeds of the sale of reparations."

The United States is also recognized as having an interest in any

OPPORTUNITY'S KNOCK

The Open Way

The favorite thought of a lot of people is that something or somebody is blocking their progress. It's a good excuse for standing still, but a bad promise for action.

It's a cheering fact for the energetic that nothing can stop the advance of a good worker. The self-sympathizers won't look at it that way. But the truth always has been that a good man could get the better of his obstacles.

When you realize that your opportunity lies just ahead of you, you reach out to seize it. When you feel that you have everything to work for, you put everything you have into your work. You're on the way to success.

NEW CITY SCHOOLS DECLARED NEEDED

Requests for a number of new school buildings, in addition to enlargement and improvement of other buildings, were heard by the board of education at its meeting Tuesday, and while no definite action was taken the board promised cooperation in working with the finance committee of city council in an attempt to secure special appropriations for the work.

Mrs. George Obar, representing the Tech High Parent-Teacher association, asked $200,000 for a new unit for the Henry W. Grady Senior High school for boys. Three Tech High students also appeared before the board, outlining needs of increased housing facilities.

Mrs. W. A. Hensell headed a delegation which asked a new building to replace the present Ormeewood school, the estimated cost of which is $250,000.

Carrying out plans for completion of the Atlanta Normal Training school, which includes building of an auditorium, was urged by Mrs. J. T. Wall, president of the Parent-Teacher association of that school.

A kindergarten and rooms for the adjustment class was requested by the Goldsmith school.

Housing Additions Asked. A delegation from the Spring Street school claimed that 45 per cent of students at that school are housed in non-standard classrooms, and asked additional facilities.

More rooms, said to be necessary to prevent double sessions, were requested for the Tenth Street school.

Representatives of the Parent-Teacher association of the Ira Street school claimed that there is only one light in the building, and asked that sufficient lights be installed to permit giving programs at night. They also asked a fence for one side of the building.

Mrs. Julian Harris, president of the Calhoun school Parent-Teacher association, requested a new auditorium for that school, and a similar request was made by representatives of the James L. Key school.

Cooperation of the board in obtaining appropriation of $1,500 from city council to supplement the fund already raised for construction of an auditorium at the William A. Bass Junior High school was asked by Principal J. H. Smith.

The need of an additional unit and auditorium for the O'Keefe Junior High school, and an auditorium for the S. M. Inman school also was presented.

Representatives of the Inman school told the board money had been raised for grading the school yard, and asked permission to proceed with the work. A special committee was appointed to confer with the Parent-Teacher organization of the school relative to starting the work as soon as possible.

Need Grady III Unit. A report of Superintendent of Schools Willis A. Sutton showed an additional unit is needed badly at the Henry W. Grady High school for boys; that new buildings are necessary at the Davis, Frank A. Stanton, Stewart Avenue and Ormeewood schools; that a new building is required for the Hoke Smith Junior High school, and that additional housing space should be provided at the Bass and O'Keefe Junior Highs.

Conditions are worst at the Hoke Smith school, he said, as at present some students are quartered in the Hill street building, while others are forced to attend classes at Commercial High school.

Mr. Sutton quoted figures showing that without considering the natural growth in the city's population, and the consequent growth of the school population, 1,541 students will be enrolled at the Henry W. Grady school this fall, and that the total estimate indicates that the number will be closer to 1,650, or almost 800 more than its present capacity.

Double sessions will be necessary at Bass and O'Keefe Junior High schools unless additional space is provided, and new buildings are needed to replace the "fire traps" at Davis, Stanton, Stewart Avenue, and Ormeewood schools, he declared.

No action was taken on the 1925 budget, but a committee, named last year, was reappointed and authorized to consider the budget and appear before the finance committee of city council to outline both operating and building needs of the school department.

Alexander, Tenth ward, Mrs. H. J. Couch, Eleventh ward, Mrs. A. B. Boring, and Twelfth ward, Mrs. E. W. Camp.

Henry B. Kennedy, of the Fulton National bank, was reelected treasurer without opposition.

No Opposition Develops. Opposition to Mr. Hancock had been expected, and reports had been current for several days that the opposing strength would be centered on Mr. Gaines. However, Mr. Gaines denied that he was a candidate, and he was not nominated.

Both Mr. Slate and Dr. Eubanks, it is understood, asked before the meeting that they be not nominated. As a result of Mrs. Nelson's being named first vice president, it is expected that Mr. Slate will be chosen to head the purchasing committee.

considered the most important of the board. While new committees will not be named for a month, Mr. Slate will continue as chairman of the purchasing committee until that time.

COMMITTEE FORM GOVERNMENT PLAN URGED ON BOARD

A fight to restore the committee form of administration in the board of education was opened at the meeting. The first gun was fired by Mrs. Kate

Hess, who charged that a thorough test of the method used during 1924 had proved the system unsatisfactory, and introduced a resolution asking a return to the old form.

No action can be taken until the next meeting, however, as a change in rules is required, and no such change can be adopted until the motion has been on the table for a month. It is practically certain that the matter will be taken up at the February session.

Reestablish Committees. If Mrs. Hess' resolution is passed, practically all matters brought before the board will be investigated by a committee which will make recommendations to the board. The move would reestablish all standing committees, among the most important of which are finance, building and grounds, rules and regulations, administration, health, claims and charter amendments and public relations.

According to the testimony, Phillips is minus his job, having been discharged by an irate employer who learned of his arrest.

It happened like this: Tuesday morning, as dawn began to break, Phillips was trudging north on Ivy street, bound for work. He neared the intersection of Peachtree street, when the stentorian tones of a policeman commanded him to halt, and at the same time the officer took a firm hold on his coat-tail.

"I want you, son," said the arm of the law, determinedly and assuredly.

"What for," was the weak reply of Phillips.

"You'll find out soon enough," was the answer.

The bell rang and the wagon came. The jail was reached and Phillips shoved in. And sure enough, "soon enough," he found out "what especially good."

He was charged with stealing an automobile.

"I couldn't steal an automobile," Phillips protested. "I couldn't run one if you gave it to me—and I can prove it."

He did. Several witnesses testified that he had no knowledge of the workings of an automobile, and as a chauffeur, he was a splendid wagoner.

"We haven't been able to get anything on him," Judge Callaway was told by the arresting officer. "I thought he was the man, but he's not."

But it developed that on that fateful Tuesday morning, Phillips had partaken of a drink of illicit beverage. At least he said "a drink." The charge was made "drunk," however.

All told, the "Tragedy of Errors" cost Phillips a day in jail, his job and $6 for being "drunk."

GUNSTER AT HIS BEST IN GRADY CONCERT

A large and appreciative audience Tuesday night attended a concert given by Frederick Gunster, American tenor, under auspices of the Grady hospital auxiliary, at Eggleston Memorial hall, North avenue and West Peachtree street, at 8:15 o'clock. Mr. Gunster was at his best and his interpretations of old negro folk songs were especially good.

But at the same time he wants to know how could a man steal an automobile if he doesn't know how to operate one. What chance has he of eloping with somebody's flivver, when he doesn't know the clutch from the first installment?

These questions Phillips propounded to Recorder A. W. Callaway Tuesday, when he was arraigned on a charge of larceny of an automobile. According to the testimony, Phillips is minus his job, having been discharged by an irate employer who learned of his arrest.

Sun's Eclipse Will Thrill Savants, Says One Who Won Wife on Futile Expedition

Astronomer Says New Photographs Will Add Little to Solar Knowledge on Main Features.

New York, January 13.—Dr. Harold Jacoby, who is the chief astronomer at Columbia University and once journeyed all round the earth to see an eclipse of the sun—only to miss it—believes scientists will get a powerful kick out of the forthcoming phenomenon, of January 24 and that's about all.

Dr. Jacoby doesn't believe it possible, with instruments and methods now known to astronomers, to add much to the existing store of knowledge concerning the sun, its composition, the source of its power and the nature and extent of its sphere of activity.

Photographs may be taken which will show some infinite detail not hitherto disclosed by all the thousands of pictures made of the sun, he said, and when studied may clear up some minor point of conjecture or controversy.

"And of course, each little point that may be cleared up, or each little item that may be added to our fund of solar information will be worth all the expenditure of time and money," he said.

In 1889, when he was 24 years old and an instructor in astronomy at Columbia, Dr. Jacoby was assistant astronomer of an expedition to Africa to observe the solar eclipse of that year.

The old three-masted frigate Pensacola took the expedition there. It was a four months' voyage. And when, in the bleak wilderness near Cape Town, the scientists waited beside their instruments for the sun to appear behind the moon's cold shoulder, a bit of cloud sailed across a clear sky, right into the line of vision and obscured the picture.

The expedition was a failure, except that Dr. Jacoby met in Cape Town the daughter of the head of the British observatory there.

She is now his wife.

WAR CLAIMS PACT TO BE SIGNED TODAY

other disposition that may be made of bonds under the Dawes plan, if not sold or distributed. The agreement provides that should payments in any one year fall below $5,000,000 gold marks for the American army of occupation and $4,000,000 marks for war damage claims, the balance due on each particular year would be carried over until the following year with simple interest at 4 1/2 per cent.

Small Powers Heard.
The small powers led by Brazil had their innings at the conference today; they presented their claims before the plenary session, even though this caused a delay of one day in terminating the conference. With the Anglo-American divergence over the payment of the United States of war damages settled the entire day was spent by the experts and drafting committees in putting their report in readiness for ratification at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Dr. Souza Dantas, of Brazil, asked the conference that Brazil's claim for war damages be recognized in principle. He had a list of claims for ships sunk, cargoes destroyed and seamen drowned, the total amount of which he asked to be referred to the mixed claims commission. To this the conference agreed.

Dr. Souza Dantas made a reservation for his country, which does not share in the Spa percentage reimbursement. He asked that a certain percentage of the Spa percentage be allowed Brazil when Belgium has abandoned whatever fraction of her 8 per cent under the Spa agreement is finally decided upon. The conference agreed that Brazil should be reimbursed for her war losses, but the method of reimbursement will form part of another discussion.

SET BACK SIX WEEKS

itself for more than three hours. Most senators had thought the bill would be passed in the Senate today, but the fight was ended except for a perfunctory vote.

Senator Norris, upon his calculations, however, offering his bill in amended form. He conceded later when he objected to Senator Underwood taking a like course that his strategy could have been frustrated by any senator interposing objection.

Administration Forces Split.

Administration forces, which joined with some of the democrats last week in substituting the Underwood measure for the Norris bill, were divided today on the Jones substitute, enough of them going over to supporters of the Norris plan to put through the Washington bill, which would have the effect of deferring final congressional action on the disposition of the power and nitrate plant for at least a year.

Then when Senator Norris got his amended measure before the senate, enough of the Underwood forces went over to the Norris group to substitute the Nebraska senator's measure for the Jones bill.

In the ensuing debate there were indications that enough of the administration forces would again join with supporters of the Underwood bill to substitute that for the Norris plan. Some leaders predicted privately that if the Jones substitute was offered it would be rejected, declaring that otherwise the senate might find it extremely difficult to emerge from the circle around which it revolved today.

GEORGIA SENATORS VOTED FOR NORRIS PLAN.

Washington, January 13.—Both Georgia senators voted for the Norris plan of government operation at Muscle Shoals, a substitute for the Jones amendment adopted Tuesday and then rejected.

Senator George voted for the Underwood bill, which was displaced by adoption of the Jones amendment. Senator Harris voted against the Underwood measure. Both Harris and George voted against the Jones amendment Tuesday.

Senator George, in a statement to the senate, explained that he had never held that the government is incapable of handling a project such as that at Muscle Shoals, but had voted for the Underwood bill with other southern senators in the belief that it would best serve the interests of the south, through the guarantee of fertilizer production. He had never been controlled in his support of the Underwood bill, he said, but had stood with other southern senators in its support from the first for the reasons given.

Norris has so changed his measure now that it provides for fertilizer production, which has been one of the principal aims of southern senators in development of Muscle Shoals.

HUSTED EVIDENCE IN ATHENS CASES

on election day last fall, Husted says: "I went to the polls several times during the day. Did not see anything unusual or crooked work."

Practically all of Husted's efforts, according to his report, centered upon Henry T. Culp, a member of the Athens city council and member of a popular pool room here. Husted admittedly desired to get Culp into a poker game with witnesses. Culp admitted, according to the report, that he had at one time operated a poker establishment in the downtown section and the report shows that on October 21 Husted himself rented the same rooms formerly leased by Culp. He failed, however, to persuade Culp to visit the place, and two days later, on October 23, the Athens police raided the place. The raid was late at night and Husted says they found "about twelve men sitting talking, but all evidence had been destroyed."

Husted Rented House.

Husted later rented a house, known as "Jago's Place," just inside the city limits, and operated it as a gambling house. He was assisted in this undertaking by one "Ace" Hammond, who is described in the report as the "head bootlegger" at the "Q-room." It was here that the desired evidence against Culp and others was finally secured.

GOVERNOR NOT TO APPEAR.

Paul Collett, referred to as an assistant of J. C. Husted, in alleged Ku Klux Klan investigations at Athens, is known to Atlanta. Collett is said to be a professional bootlegger from Atlanta, but he could not be identified as implicated in any operations in the illicit traffic.

In stating that he did not intend complying with the subpoena to attend the Athens trial, Governor Walker reiterated his statement of several days ago in which he asserted that he knew nothing of alleged Klan efforts at Athens.

Following reports last week that the governor's name had been linked with grand jury investigation of law enforcement in Athens, Governor Walker entered an emphatic denial of reports that he had approved a plan whereby a special Ku Klux Klan investigation was to be sent to Athens for a "clean up job."

The governor explained that several weeks ago a group of Georgians called at his residence in Knoxville with a proposal to hold a meeting in Atlanta to discuss law enforcement conditions and that during the meeting someone remarked that the Klan was lending its influence to suppression of crime.

"This statement drew forth no comment," the governor said. "The fact that I made no reference to this might have led to the report emanating from Athens," the chief executive said.

M. E. Missionary Dies.

New York, January 13.—The board of foreign missions of the Methodist Episcopal church today announced the death in Lima, Peru, yesterday of Dr. Frederic Pay Wolfe, who had served as a missionary in Mexico and South America for 16 years. He was a native of Orionville, Mich., and a graduate of Albion college and Boston University School of Theology. Death was caused by pneumonia.

DARRAH PRAISES WORK OF LEGION

Speaking before a large number of Atlanta Legionnaires at a luncheon Tuesday at the Knickerbocker hotel, Colonel Thomas C. Darrah, chief of staff of the Fourth Corps area, declared that no organization in the United States is doing more to foster national patriotism than the American Legion.

Colonel Darrah pointed out opportunities for service to the country and community offered to members of the Legion and urged that all ex-service men who are not now members become identified with the organization.

The luncheon was given by Argonne post No. 1 in line with the expansion campaign which the post is conducting this week and was presided over by Commander William A. Simon.

The colonel stated that many ex-service men do not appear to understand purposes and ideals of the American Legion and expressed the hope that every eligible man in Atlanta would become a member of the local post and add his voice and energies to the constructive civic program which the post has undertaken in behalf of the community.

Prizes for the largest number of members obtained Tuesday again went to the Avon post, headed by Robert E. Lee Cone.

Arrangements had been made for the Legion to direct the entire radio conference program Tuesday night over Ludden and Bates' station and the following program was offered: Popular old-time war pieces by the American Legion Severens, six-piece jazz band directed by Ransome Wynne; Miss Mary Hurley, soprano, assisted by the "Happy Boys," three-piece string orchestra; and an address by the commander, Mr. Simon.

It was announced that Mayor Walter A. Sims would speak at Wednesday's luncheon.

There was no rush on the part of either Coolidge or Borah to make a public indication, though the conference indicated that they intend to cooperate. Further evidence of this was apparent in the decision of Borah not to block the bringing of the world court plan out of the foreign relations committee Wednesday.

But there is no sign of a merging of minds. In fact the president let it be known at the white house Tuesday that he does not agree with Borah that an extra session of congress is necessary.

No More Resignations?

Borah is equally independent about other matters. His silence regarding the appointment of Kellogg as secretary of state can be heard all over Washington. But both are sensible men and they expect to work in harmony despite individual differences on certain questions.

As to cabinet resignations, the white house said that no resignations are expected. But the white house said that before and then there were two in the last week, so Washington is naturally a little skeptical. However, two of those who were most likely to quit, Secretary of War Weeks and Secretary of Labor Davis, have decided to stay.

bones?" queried Mr. Sharts. "On that point the church stands on what St. Paul said," replied Bishop Brewster, and it was explained afterward that he referred to this passage:

"I know that my Redeemer liveth and though worms destroy this mortal body, yet in my flesh shall I see God."

Mr. Sharts declared that the Nicene creed had been formulated in A. D. 325 by a council which was under the domination of the Emperor Constantine, whose character he assailed. He dilated upon the superstition of the age and attacked Constantine's character, adding:

Treason to Human Soul.

"It is treason to the human soul to say in that age and under such a man that man reached his ultimate conception of deity."

Mr. Sharts pleaded for the right of members of the church to use the word "latitude" in connection with interpreting their beliefs. He asserted that in basing their case against Bishop Brown on 23 detached extracts from his book "Communism and Christianity," the prosecution had misrepresented his client and by analogy quoted a score of extracts from pamphlets written by the church advocates, declared each had contravened a doctrine of the church and then challenged the court to agree upon just what doctrines had been violated.

"Bishop Brown in this book discusses not the modern conception of God but the sky-dwelling, earth-dwelling, Jehovah of the ancient Jews," said Mr. Sharts. "Nowhere does he refer to Jehovah as God and nowhere has he referred to the modern conception of deity. He has discussed only the gods of the past and the motto of the book: 'Banish gods from the skies does not mean banish God from your hearts.'"

uation was directed largely toward the prevention of vehicular accidents and the improved conditions, as evidenced by the figures, show that automobile drivers and pedestrians need more care and caution during 1924 than in the previous year.

Figures covering only accidents caused by motor vehicles show that more than twice the number of people were killed from this cause in 1924. In 1923 there were 55 deaths caused by motor vehicles, but in 1924 there were only 24 deaths from this cause. This indicates that the drivers used more caution last year than during the previous year according to traffic officials.

Report of the safety council includes a report of other accidental deaths in addition to those caused by vehicles. It shows that there were 11 deaths in street car accidents as compared to eight in 1923. The preceding year. It shows that eight persons were killed in railway accidents in 1924 as compared to 18 in 1923, another great reduction.

Deaths in fires, explosions, elevators and other miscellaneous causes were 32 in 1924 and 31 in 1923. There were 43 deaths in 1924 large accidents and 49 deaths of this kind in 1923, these accidents being caused by misuse of tools, poisons, fireworks and other miscellaneous causes.

Big Decrease Shown.

From all causes total accidental deaths in 1924 amounted to 119 as compared to 163 in 1923, a decrease of approximately 30 per cent.

bones?" queried Mr. Sharts. "On that point the church stands on what St. Paul said," replied Bishop Brewster, and it was explained afterward that he referred to this passage:

"I know that my Redeemer liveth and though worms destroy this mortal body, yet in my flesh shall I see God."

Mr. Sharts declared that the Nicene creed had been formulated in A. D. 325 by a council which was under the domination of the Emperor Constantine, whose character he assailed. He dilated upon the superstition of the age and attacked Constantine's character, adding:

Treason to Human Soul.

"It is treason to the human soul to say in that age and under such a man that man reached his ultimate conception of deity."

Mr. Sharts pleaded for the right of members of the church to use the word "latitude" in connection with interpreting their beliefs. He asserted that in basing their case against Bishop Brown on 23 detached extracts from his book "Communism and Christianity," the prosecution had misrepresented his client and by analogy quoted a score of extracts from pamphlets written by the church advocates, declared each had contravened a doctrine of the church and then challenged the court to agree upon just what doctrines had been violated.

"Bishop Brown in this book discusses not the modern conception of God but the sky-dwelling, earth-dwelling, Jehovah of the ancient Jews," said Mr. Sharts. "Nowhere does he refer to Jehovah as God and nowhere has he referred to the modern conception of deity. He has discussed only the gods of the past and the motto of the book: 'Banish gods from the skies does not mean banish God from your hearts.'"

uation was directed largely toward the prevention of vehicular accidents and the improved conditions, as evidenced by the figures, show that automobile drivers and pedestrians need more care and caution during 1924 than in the previous year.

Figures covering only accidents caused by motor vehicles show that more than twice the number of people were killed from this cause in 1924. In 1923 there were 55 deaths caused by motor vehicles, but in 1924 there were only 24 deaths from this cause. This indicates that the drivers used more caution last year than during the previous year according to traffic officials.

Report of the safety council includes a report of other accidental deaths in addition to those caused by vehicles. It shows that there were 11 deaths in street car accidents as compared to eight in 1923. The preceding year. It shows that eight persons were killed in railway accidents in 1924 as compared to 18 in 1923, another great reduction.

Deaths in fires, explosions, elevators and other miscellaneous causes were 32 in 1924 and 31 in 1923. There were 43 deaths in 1924 large accidents and 49 deaths of this kind in 1923, these accidents being caused by misuse of tools, poisons, fireworks and other miscellaneous causes.

Big Decrease Shown.

From all causes total accidental deaths in 1924 amounted to 119 as compared to 163 in 1923, a decrease of approximately 30 per cent.

DARRAH PRAISES WORK OF LEGION

Speaking before a large number of Atlanta Legionnaires at a luncheon Tuesday at the Knickerbocker hotel, Colonel Thomas C. Darrah, chief of staff of the Fourth Corps area, declared that no organization in the United States is doing more to foster national patriotism than the American Legion.

Colonel Darrah pointed out opportunities for service to the country and community offered to members of the Legion and urged that all ex-service men who are not now members become identified with the organization.

The luncheon was given by Argonne post No. 1 in line with the expansion campaign which the post is conducting this week and was presided over by Commander William A. Simon.

The colonel stated that many ex-service men do not appear to understand purposes and ideals of the American Legion and expressed the hope that every eligible man in Atlanta would become a member of the local post and add his voice and energies to the constructive civic program which the post has undertaken in behalf of the community.

Prizes for the largest number of members obtained Tuesday again went to the Avon post, headed by Robert E. Lee Cone.

Arrangements had been made for the Legion to direct the entire radio conference program Tuesday night over Ludden and Bates' station and the following program was offered: Popular old-time war pieces by the American Legion Severens, six-piece jazz band directed by Ransome Wynne; Miss Mary Hurley, soprano, assisted by the "Happy Boys," three-piece string orchestra; and an address by the commander, Mr. Simon.

It was announced that Mayor Walter A. Sims would speak at Wednesday's luncheon.

There was no rush on the part of either Coolidge or Borah to make a public indication, though the conference indicated that they intend to cooperate. Further evidence of this was apparent in the decision of Borah not to block the bringing of the world court plan out of the foreign relations committee Wednesday.

But there is no sign of a merging of minds. In fact the president let it be known at the white house Tuesday that he does not agree with Borah that an extra session of congress is necessary.

No More Resignations?

Borah is equally independent about other matters. His silence regarding the appointment of Kellogg as secretary of state can be heard all over Washington. But both are sensible men and they expect to work in harmony despite individual differences on certain questions.

As to cabinet resignations, the white house said that no resignations are expected. JITNEYS ASSAILED BY P. S. ARKWRIGHT

Jitneys were compared Tuesday night to street peddlers, who harass established, tax-paying business enterprises without contributing anything to the community, in a speech on the street railway situation by P. S. Arkwright, president of the Georgia Railway and Power company, before the Atlanta Retail Food Dealers' association at the Chamber of Commerce.

Protection of the street railway from this form of unregulated competition was declared necessary by Mr. Arkwright if the street cars are to continue in operation.

New officers of the association were installed as follows: J. H. Merritt, president; Sam Zinkow, W. R. Brann, Jr., and M. M. Bullard, vice presidents; and M. Weinberg, treasurer. R. V. Bergen was re-elected secretary. J. H. Bullock, past president, presided at the ceremonies, which followed a buffet supper. Annual reports of officers and committees showed the association to be in strong condition.

The nature of the work it performs in the community is responsible for much of the misunderstanding of the street railway problem, Mr. Arkwright declared.

In every family there is some member upon whom all the others depend on to do the thousand and one small tasks that enable the family to live in comfort," he said. "This one member takes the responsibility for looking after the details because some one must look after the small things that make home life possible. If we never appreciate how much this person does for us, we don't feel grateful. On the contrary, we are very impatient of any small neglect, we excuse no lapse from the service this person gives us day and night, we complain if anything goes wrong, forgetful of how much we owe."

The street railway occupies just such a position in the community. It does nothing brilliant, it merely gives a routine daily service upon which the community depends. It caters to necessities, not to luxuries or pleasures. And the community, like the family, doesn't feel grateful, but is impatient if the service is interrupted for even a minute, forgetting the days and weeks when there are no interruptions. We applaud brilliance, the pinch-hitter gets the applause, the steady, reliable player is overlooked.

"But, it is a necessary service to the community, and our appeal to the city council is only that conditions will be made such that it will be possible for us to continue to give service, just as a grocery store would be forced out of business if a flock of unlicensed peddlers camped on the sidewalk in front of its door, so will the street railway be forced out of business if unregulated jitneys are permitted to continue peddling rides on the streets."

tion, superficially, that he was in the best of circumstances.

Eleven clean handkerchiefs and one soiled one were found by investigators. None of these had laundry marks on them. The same was true of the man's shirts and collars. He wore size 15 1/2 shirts and collars of the same size. He had two soft hats, one light brown and the other dark brown, size 7 1/8.

The suicide apparently was about 37 years of age, weighed 165 pounds and was 5 feet, 7 inches tall. He left a pair of No. 8 gray suede gloves. His suit was double-breasted, about "40" measure, of fine material, dark blue, with a faint gray stripe.

Religious Leaders Join Movement For Home Visitation Plans Here

Three widely-known religious leaders who are taking prominent parts in plans under way for a religious survey of Atlanta. Left to right, Father J. A. Horton, of Sacred Heart church, Atlanta; Dr. D. Witherspoon Dodge, president of the Protestant Ministerial association, and Rabbi David Marx, of Pryor Street temple.

Religious leaders of Atlanta, including representatives of all faiths, united Tuesday in endorsing the proposed Home Visitation movement which will be in effect in this city for two hours on the afternoon of January 30. Every home in Atlanta will be visited by various leaders who will carry invitations to every person to attend Sunday school, or church, or synagogue—of their own preference—and records will be made of the church connection or preference of each person visited.

Between the hours of 2 and 4 o'clock on Friday afternoon, January 30, the movement will be prosecuted by hundreds of leading men and women of the city, the purpose being to urge everyone to affiliate with some religious group or body. In a broad sense it will be a religious census of Atlanta and when completed, copies of reports will be furnished pastors of all churches. This information will be compiled so as to include the names and addresses of persons visited, and their religious preferences.

Other cities within a radius of several miles of Atlanta will be included in the movement.

Volunteers Sought. Volunteers will be called for in every church in the city on Sunday preceding the Friday designated for the visitation move, according to present plans. Volunteers from semi-religious organizations and others are expected to be enrolled in large numbers, it is said, and a sufficient number will be obtained to thoroughly canvass the homes in the two hour period.

A joint statement Tuesday by a number of Atlanta ministers sets out the purpose and plans of the move.

The statement follows: "The plan is not an experiment, but has been visited through this plan during the past 17 years. Many millions of people have been placed in touch with the organized expression of the religion of their choice. For many years reports of the good results of this work in other cities, and others who had heard of it, have been anxious to have it observed on this large scale in Atlanta. The Georgia State Sunday School association leaders have been especially anxious to secure the work for Atlanta and through this organization, J. S. Durham, Chicago, international superintendent of home visitation for the International Council of Religious Education, has been secured to assist in the direction of the plan at this time."

"Mr. Durham reached Atlanta a few days ago and has met with the Protestant Ministerial association, the Christian council and other organizations, with all of the Catholic clergyman and leaders and organizations of the Catholic church and conferred with all the Jewish rabbis and leaders and organizations of the Jewish faith, and all religious leaders of the city and adjoining cities have heartily endorsed the plan."

Cooperation Assured.

"Local leaders state that no work was ever undertaken in the history of the city which commanded such complete cooperation of all faiths and all leaders, and they expect the same large results for good along all lines—religious, social, educational, commercial, industrial and civic here, as reported from other large cities."

"Leaders in the various churches, synagogues and Sunday schools will call for 3,000 volunteers on Sunday, January 26, to do the visiting in two hours on Friday afternoon, January 30. Local leaders say that the interest is so great they believe fully 1,000 people will volunteer and the work completed in less than the two hours set apart, as has been done in a number of other large cities."

"Those who volunteer to give the two hours to this interesting work will give their names and addresses to their pastors, will attend a brief meeting on Thursday evening, January 23, for instructions, and will go out two and two to visit the homes of a block in their own neighborhoods. There will be only one meeting of the committee, which will be held in the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce Thursday afternoon, January 22, at 4:30 o'clock. Mr. Durham will address this meeting of the committee as well as the meeting of all the volunteers on Thursday evening, January 23, where he also will give final instructions."

"This city and adjoining cities will be divided into subdistricts, a chairman in charge of each district, with headquarters in center of each district. The International council, the Georgia State and Atlanta Division Sunday School associations, R. D. Webb, of Atlanta, is general superintendent of the Georgia State Sunday School association and was instrumental in securing the work for this city."

"The plan is under the auspices of all Protestant, Catholic and Jewish Sunday schools, churches and synagogues, the Atlanta Protestant Ministerial association, Christian council, the Catholic clergymen, Jewish rabbis, Young Men's Christian association, Knights of Columbus, Jewish Young Men's societies, Young Women's Christian association, Catholic Women's societies, Jewish Women's societies, Salvation Army, Volunteers of America, the clubs, the educational, social, commercial, industrial and civic organizations."

"All believe that this spirit of confidence and cooperation which the movement has brought among all religious and races and all organizations interested in the betterment of all the people will be of large and lasting benefit to all interests. The public will be kept informed as to the progress of the plans through the newspapers."

declared to be the scene of the thickest of the fray.

Here reports were confirmed. These were enough to start a battle. And they refused to stop battling.

It was the National Guard cavalrymen and infantrymen participating in a far from quiet little sham battle. The city thing which was missed was to have informed the city of Atlanta officially, and the police department, incidentally, that they were going to have a little struggle, at which blank cartridges would be used freely.

"Say," started Lieutenant Scott. "You've gotta cut out this shootin'."

"You want to sleep, and, besides, the whole town thinks there's a war goin' on."

Challenge Right of Police.

Lieutenant Gouley, in charge of the guardsmen, challenged the right of the police to interfere with the "functioning of our duty."

Whereupon arose a heated discussion between a couple of officers as to the feasibility of carrying out the said duty. Lieutenant Scott became peeved when the militia refused to cut out the firing and threatened to arrest the warriors.

Upon this technicality of status, the battle was called off temporarily. But today it will be renewed, it was said, as the militiamen claim they have a right to stage a sham battle whenever they want.

Most of the involuntary audience were satisfied that they could go on fighting if they would only get a publicity agent and set a time and date.

There were 250 soldiers in the two armies and more than 500 cartridges were fired.

It was a big evening for Morningside.

ers than Mussolini and his black shirts to administer the election.

About 40 deputies attended the meeting at which Giolitti, Salandra and Orlando attacked the government. The leaders condemned the hand-picked majority with which Mussolini has provided himself in the chamber. When the electoral bill came before the body on Wednesday all three former premiers are expected to speak. The Italian populace is anxious to know what they have planned.

May Be More Gesture. Owing to Mussolini's almost impregnable parliamentary position, it means whereby the triumvirate hope to force him from power are a subject of considerable speculation. Even should members of the other liberal opposition wing, known as the avanguardisti, who refuse even to participate in the chamber deliberations, support the former premier, Mussolini still would command a majority.

If the former premier and his 40 followers are content to accept Mussolini's parliamentary position as impregnable, their action will be regarded as a mere gesture of protest.

During their conference Tuesday, the three statesmen are understood to have come to agreement regarding their joint battle against the government in behalf of liberalism.

Representatives of the Grady Hospital auxiliary requested $8,000 for a home for convalescent patients.

Georgia National Guard. Adjutant General Charles H. Cox asked an appropriation of $2,400 for the Georgia national guard.

Five thousand dollars to be used as the last payment on widening of Pachtree street at Ellis was asked by Forest Adair, Jr., and W. H. Kiser.

Postmaster Edward K. Large, with a delegation from the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association, appeared on behalf of the plan to renumber all houses in Atlanta, and stated that $8,400 will be necessary for the work.

W. T. Buchanan, investigator in the city's law department, stated that between $500 and $800 is necessary to settle damages to the lot owned by Dr. C. J. Vaughn, located in the rear of the Young Street school.

A. J. Orme, appearing on behalf of Mrs. E. P. Ansley, asked $2,500 for a water main in Ansley Park.

Avenue Extension. J. L. McCord, who has acted as the city's agent in extension of Madison avenue, told the committee that $50,000 is needed this year to carry on the work. He stated that if the money is given, the project can be completed in 1925.

City Clerk Walter C. Taylor told the committee that every branch of his department showed an increase in revenue last year, and that the amount of receipts was larger than anticipated the 1924 finance committee. He asked only one salary increase—$25 per month for License Inspector Howard.

A delegation of women representing the Old Women's home, asked the committee for $9,000 to complete the fund for a $10,000 home which last year's finance committee recommended.

Bolling Jones and Mr. Choate asked $5,000 for the Atlanta Freight bureau.

Abatement of the smoke nuisance last year was reported, and $2,800 asked to carry on the work this year.

The committee Tuesday authorized City Controller B. Graham West to ask for bids on deposits and loans for 1925.

Next year's needs of the police, fire, Grady hospital, prisons, library, and construction departments—the last named including sewers, bridges and streets—will be presented to the committee today, and it is expected that the city's public hearing will end this afternoon.

It also is probable that the school situation will be discussed before the committee meets in executive session, as Dr. Duval informed John T. Hancock, president of the board of education, that the subject has not been closed, and plans are being made for a committee of the board, accompanied by delegations from various schools, to appear before the committee.

Mr. Hancock said Tuesday that the total receipts of the school department for this year—including the 26 per cent of the city's revenue, the state school fund non-resident tuition, vocational education fund, and the special appropriations promised to repay the $350,000 borrowed from Atlanta banks, and the $101,000 to pay for free text books purchased last year—will be approximately $275,000 short of the amount needed to operate in 1925.

meeting, in which he scored pistol-toting and other forms of law-breaking.

The verbatim resolution adopted by the Atlanta Exchange club was as follows:

"Whereas, The Atlanta Constitution is waging a splendid vigorous campaign to arouse the public conscience to the increasing menace of the hip-pocket gun; and

"Whereas, there is not a shadow of excuse for the existence of such a menace in any community of 20th century civilization;

"Now, therefore, be it resolved: "First—That the Exchange club of Atlanta and the individual members thereof lend unqualified inroadment to this movement to outlaw the pistol and ban it from the city of Atlanta and the state of Georgia.

"Second, that a copy of these resolutions be mailed to The Atlanta Constitution with the club's hearty commendation of The Constitution's bold stand."

Atlantes Club Acts.

In commending The Constitution on its "noble and fearless stand against the pistol," and wishing success to The Constitution in its efforts "in behalf of law-abiding citizens of Atlanta and of Georgia," the Atlantes club passed the following resolution:

"Whereas, the carrying of pistols and revolvers has long been recognized as a menace to law and order; and, whereas, the increase of crime can be attributed, in a large degree, to this vicious practice; and, whereas, under the laws of Georgia at present in force, the sale of such dangerous firearms is practically unlimited, so that pistols can be sold or purchased by anyone; and,

"Whereas, The Atlanta Constitution has inaugurated a movement to suppress or regulate the sale and purchase of pistols and revolvers in the state of Georgia; and, whereas, it is the duty of all citizens and organizations of citizens to aid and encourage such a movement, and openly to express their approval of same, so that the legislature may be guided thereby;

"Therefore, be it resolved, by the Atlantes club, in meeting assembled, that the Atlantes club and the individual members thereof formally express their approval of such a movement, and pledge their hearty support to the same; and,

"Be it further resolved, that all citizens and organizations of citizens be urged to take similar action; and,

"Be it further resolved, that The Atlanta Constitution be commended for its constructive efforts in this direction; and,

"Be it further resolved, that these resolutions be entered upon the minutes of this meeting, and that a copy thereof be furnished The Atlanta Constitution."

In the interim, letters of praise for The Constitution's stand against pistols continued to pour in from every section of the city and state.

Protect your gums and save your teeth

Just as a ship needs the closest attention under the water-line, so do your teeth under the gum-line. If the gums shrink, serious dangers result.

The teeth are loosened. They are exposed to tooth-base decay. The gums themselves become tender and bleed easily. They form sacs which become the doorways of organic disease for the whole system. They often disfigure the mouth as they recede.

If used in time and used consistently, Forhan's For the Gums will prevent Pyorrhea or check its progress. Forhan's is safe, efficient and pleasant-tasting. It preserves gum health, corrects tender gum spots, hardens gum tissues so they will offer proper support to the teeth, and keeps your mouth fresh and healthy.

Forhan's is more than a tooth paste; it checks Pyorrhea. Thousands have found it beneficial for years. For your own sake ask for and get Forhan's For the Gums. At all druggists, 35c and 60c in tubes.

CENTRAL OF GEORGIA PASSENGER TRAINS 98 PER CENT ON TIME IN 1924.

The Central of Georgia recognizes that the operation of trains on time is one of the main factors in that satisfactory service which the public has a right to expect.

It is a matter of pride to the Central of Georgia that in Nineteen Hundred and Twenty-four 98 per cent of its passenger trains were on time. During the year we operated on our 1920 miles of track 37,269 passenger trains, of which 36,509 maintained schedule. The record by months for 1923-1924 is as follows:

	1924	1923
January	97.3%	95.6%
February	98.0	94.0
March	98.0	94.9
April	97.7	95.5
May	98.7	97.5
June	98.8	97.8
July	96.7	98.2
August	99.1	97.6
September	99.8	98.3
October	99.2	98.5
November	98.0	98.1
December	94.8	96.3
Average	98.0	96.9

The passenger on the Central of Georgia may rely upon much more than on-time arrival at his destination. He is assured of safety. For the past 8 years this railway has had but one passenger fatality, and this was an individual who fell off the back platform where he was standing, hit on his head and was killed. In these 8 years the Central of Georgia has carried more than 32,000,000 passengers.

Provision for the comfort of the traveling public is made by modern steel equipment. Constant improvements are being made to the track so as to insure smooth riding. New locomotives are purchased annually and the motive power is kept in a high state of efficiency, thereby guarding against engine failure with their consequent annoying delays. In 1924 the Central of Georgia had fewer engine failures than at any time in its history, its locomotives averaging 92,742 miles per engine failure.

These are some of the things which indicate the ability of the Central of Georgia to render efficient passenger transportation service.

The same elements enter into the making of efficient freight transportation service. The demands of modern business are such that shippers and receivers of freight desire the assurance of prompt handling. This railroad operates what are known as through or manifest freight trains on fast schedules. In 1924 of the 5,399 manifest freight trains operated, 5,033, or 93.2 per cent, were on time.

In all departments of the railway employees take great pride in our reputation for efficiency and courtesy.

Service is now the only basis of competition among the railroads and it is the purpose of the Central of Georgia to develop to the highest degree the organization, equipment and facilities for satisfactory service.

Constructive criticism and suggestions are invited.

MASKED BANDIT LOOTS MAIL TRAIN

Bellmore, Long Island, N. Y., January 13.—A bandit boarded the 6:30 Long Island railroad train for New York Tuesday evening, seized the mail clerk's pistol and got away with several sacks of registered mail, when the train slowed down to stop at Merrick station. With the lower part of his face concealed by a white handkerchief, the man thrust an automatic pistol against the ribs of Hart Green, the clerk in charge of the mail car, and locked him in a small compartment used as a counting room.

Green had just received a sack of registered mail at Bellmore. This was one of those stolen by the robber. The man worked swiftly for Merrick station is only four minutes from Bellmore. Postoffice inspectors and the police of Nassau county, as well as the Long Island's special force, were notified and they immediately undertook to blanket the roads near Merrick.

Optimistic Reports Made By National Bank Leaders

Election of three new directors by the Fourth National bank, and reading of most optimistic annual reports, marked meetings Thursday of Atlanta's three national banks. In each of the reports to stockholders from officials, it was predicted that the ensuing year would "be a great year in banking matters."

J. J. Haverty, president of the Haverty Furniture company; Ben S. Read, president of the southern group for the Southern Bell Telephone company, and Robert S. Strickland, Jr., active vice president of the bank, are the new directors of the Fourth National. Marion Smith, well-known Atlanta attorney, is the new director of the Fulton National. At the meeting of the Atlanta and Lowry National, Robert E. Maddox read the report for 1924.

Fulton National Bank.

In his report to the stockholders, Dr. William J. Blalock, president of the Fulton National, outlined the history of the institution from its beginning to the present date, calling attention to the fact that the 15th birthday of the bank would be celebrated January 25.

"I come before you today," Dr. Blalock said, "with a feeling of optimism and with a greater confidence gotten up with the bank, all the senior officers having been with it since the beginning.

"At present we have 4,793 active commercial accounts, 7,517 savings accounts, 1,287 Christmas savings accounts and 511 safety deposit accounts. Our school savings department has 28,912 accounts. Our trust department, under the able management of Ronald Ransom, has been growing rapidly and is beginning to show very nice results, though this department has been established only three years."

Atlanta and Lowry National.

R. F. Maddox, chairman of the board of the Atlanta and Lowry National bank, read the report of the bank for 1924. He declared that bank was in the best condition in its history and had a brighter outlook than was ever before known.

At the annual meeting of the shareholders of the Fourth National bank Tuesday, a very satisfactory year's progress was reported.

In his annual report, J. K. Outley, president of the bank, brought out the fact that in 1924 the bank paid two semi-annual dividends of 8 per cent, and showed an increase of $2,663,581.52 in deposits, as well as a gain of more than 6,000 patrons.

At the close of the year the Fourth National was serving more than 72,000 customers, and had deposits of $22,107,257.10, with total assets in excess of $37,000,000.

During 1924 substantial enlargements of the bank's facilities were demanded by the growing volume of business, the quarters of the Peachtree and North Avenue branches being doubled, while branches on West End and Decatur branches. In addition to its main office in the Fourth National bank building at Five Points, the bank operates five branches.

Robert Strickland, Jr., a native of Tallapoosa, Ga., entered the practice of law in Atlanta after being graduated from the Atlanta Law school in 1915.

Severing the connection with the firm of Brandon & Hynds, with whom he was associated, Mr. Strickland, in 1917, entered the first officers training camp at Fort McPherson, later going overseas from Camp Gordon with the Eighty-second division, and serving with that organization in France as first lieutenant of the Three Hundred and Twenty-eighth infantry.

Returning to Atlanta in 1919, he entered the employment of the Fourth National bank shortly after his discharge from the army.

Entering into a broad study of all phases of banking and taking an active part in the work of the Atlanta chapter of the American Institute of Banking, of which he is a graduate and a past president, he was elected to the vice presidency of the Fourth National bank in January, 1922. He is prominent in the affairs of the American Bankers' association and has served on several important committees in addition to being actively identified with work of the Georgia Bankers' association. He is a member of the educational committee of the American Bankers' association and chairman of the state association's committee on public education.

Mr. Strickland married in 1919 Miss Jessie Dickey, daughter of Bishop James E. Dickey, of the M. E. church, south, and Mrs. Dickey.

J. J. Haverty.

J. J. Haverty was born in Atlanta and attended school here. His earliest recollections are of Sherman's home, lordment of Atlanta; of the soldiers burning down his father's home, and of his brother Michael's occasional visits on furlough from Lee's Army of Northern Virginia.

From the time when he started as a young boy during reconstruction days with a position as dry goods clerk with the old John Ryan company, his business career has been a continuous series of hard-earned successes.

Having advanced through successive stages to the management of Rick's carpet department, he embarked in 1885 in business for himself, when he and his brother, Michael Haverty, opened a modest store on East Hunter street, calling it the Haverty Furniture company. Two years later he formed a partnership with A. G. Rhodes, then successful and wealthy merchant, which took him to St. Louis for several years. This partnership, known as the Rhodes-Haverty Furniture company, resulted in a chain of stores operating in 17 cities, mostly in the south. Mr. Haverty's partnership with Mr. Rhodes lasted until 1908, at which time it was dissolved in a most friendly manner, businesses and properties being equally divided. Their close friendship exists to this day, and they are still associated in a company known as the Rhodes-Haverty Investment company.

Following dissolution of the Rhodes-Haverty Furniture company, Mr. Haverty, with his son and his managers, then formed the Haverty Furniture company, which now operates in Atlanta, Savannah, Charleston, Columbia, Memphis, Houston and Dallas. Mr. Haverty is president of all these stores, and his headquarters and the headquarters of all his companies are in Atlanta.

Outside of his business activities, his pursuits are largely those of a student. He is a lover of art and owns one of the most complete private collections of paintings in the south. He is not simply a collector of paintings, but a thorough connoisseur of art, and it was due to Mr. Haverty's untiring efforts that the Grand Central Art Galleries exhibition was brought to Atlanta last May.

He also is a student of the theater in its best phases, and is thoroughly versed in literature, economics and current information.

BEN S. READ

Ben S. Read, Atlanta, in June, 1924, as president of the southern group of Bell Telephone companies. It was really a return home because he was born in Gardnagh, Penn., and entered the service there of the Cumberland Telephone & Telegraph Co., one of the companies of which he is now president.

Mr. Read began his telephone career 33 years ago and for the past 15 years he has been one of the outstanding leaders in the Bell system. His wide experience, recognized ability and keen knowledge of the south made him the natural successor to J. Epps Brown as head of the southern group of the Bell system.

Starting as a toll agent in his native state of Tennessee, he spent nine years learning the telephone business from the ground up and then became manager at Owensboro, Ky. He was promoted rapidly, serving later as manager at Louisville, Ky., at New Orleans, La., and then as division superintendent for Louisiana and Mississippi.

Then he was elected general manager of the Bell Telephone Company of Missouri. Within a year he became general manager of the Missouri and Kansas Telephone company, and within another year he was elected operating vice president of the Southwestern Bell Telephone company, embracing the states of Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Texas.

During the period of government control of the telephone properties he served as director of commercial and rate matters for the Bell system under the operating board of the United States Telephone and Telegraph administration.

He was then elected president of the Mountain States Telephone & Telegraph company, operating in the states of Colorado, New Mexico, Montana, Wyoming, Utah, western Texas and southern Idaho, with headquarters in Denver, where he took an active part in the rebuilding and development of the extensive western territory of his company.

His family consists of Mrs. Read and two sons, one of whom is attending Cornell.

Girl Loses Life Trying To Scale Peak in Blizzard

Denver, Colo., January 13.—An effort to scale the east face of Long's Peak in unfavorable weather, a previously unaccomplished feat, cost the life of Miss Agnes Vaille, secretary of the Denver Chamber of Commerce, in a ragging blizzard and temperature of 50 degrees below zero in search for him today had little hope of finding him alive.

Miss Vaille's trip was started Sunday with Walter Kiener, of Denver. Their upward journey met with success. They were descending the north face of the peak when the blizzard arose. Blinded by the blizzard and stunned by the cold, Miss Vaille was forced to halt while Kiener pushed ahead to summon help. After a hazardous journey Kiener yesterday reached a timber line house halfway down the peak and led back a searching party.

Forced to travel at a snail's pace the party reached Miss Vaille too late. She was found huddled in a crevice partly covered by snow.

It was from that party that Sortland was lost.

Miss Vaille had scaled all but six peaks of more than 14,000 feet elevation in America as a member of the Colorado Mountain Climbing club. She was graduated from Smith college.

Mr. Vaille was due to arrive in Honolulu today on a vacation trip.

FUN FESTIVAL SERIES WILL RUN FOR WEEK

A series of afternoon and night entertainment, to include dancing, musical features and various games, will get under way here on the night of January 27 at Macabees temple, 2717-2 Peachtree street. The series will run through the night of January 31 and is sponsored by the Macabees of Atlanta as a benefit for indigent members of the order.

All features of the entertainment will be under supervision of members of the order in Atlanta and will be operated for that portion of the public inclined to fun, amusement and entertainment of a wholesome nature, according to sponsors.

A small per cent of the proceeds will be placed in a fund to purchase property near Atlanta for a home for aged Macabees who have no means of support in the last years of their life, it is said. Options on a number of sites already have been secured and the purchase of a suitable acreage and erection of a home is contemplated this year.

The major per cent of the proceeds of the nightly features, however, will go to providing comforts and necessities of life for members who are now in needy circumstances it is said.

Various civic clubs, secret orders and societies will have charge on different afternoons and nights during the week, which has been designated as "Macabees' Fun Festival Week."

Amusement features and fun-provoking devices of a very modern nature have been secured and popular orchestras will be heard throughout the afternoon and evening, and leading figures in Atlanta's musical circles will appear on programs from time to time in an effort to boost the fund now being raised.

BETTER THAN WHISKEY FOR COLDS AND FLU

The sensation of the drug trade is Aspirinal, the two-minute cold and cough reliever, authoritatively guaranteed by the laboratories; tested, approved and most enthusiastically endorsed by the highest authorities, and proclaimed by the people as ten times as quick and effective as whiskey, rock and rye, or any other cold and cough remedy they have ever tried.

All drug stores are supplied with the wonderful elixir, so you have but to do is to step into the nearest drug store, hand the clerk half a dollar for a bottle of Aspirinal and tell him to serve you two teaspoonsful. With your watch in your hand, take the drink at one swallow and call for your money back in two minutes if you cannot feel the distressing symptoms of your cold fading away like a dream, within the time limit. Don't be bashful, for all druggists invite you and expect you to try it. Everybody's doing it.

Take the remainder of the bottle home to your wife and children, for Aspirinal is by far the safest and most effective, the easiest to take and the most agreeable cold and cough remedy for children as well as adults. Quickest relief for catarrhal croup and children's choking up at night.—(adv.)

FLONZALEY QUARTET
HERE JANUARY 24

The Flonzaley quartet, internationally famed chamber music organization, is announced to make its annual appearance in Atlanta on the afternoon of January 24, the concert to be held at the auditorium of the Woman's club, under the auspices of the Atlanta Music club.

Since 1915 the regular visit of this organization has been regarded by music lovers of the city as the highlight of the musical season.

In its twenty-one years before the musical public the Flonzaley quartet has established itself as a standard in the fine art of chamber music. It has played in more than four hundred American cities; has made eighteen hundred appearances on this side of the Atlantic alone, and is regarded the principal factor in making known to American audiences this highest form of musical art.

Its remarkable record of successive annual appearances in different cities attests the esteem in which it is held. Innumerable cities in different parts of the country have heard the quartet in reengagements covering 12, 11 and 10 years. And some 15 and even 20. This is the tenth successive visit to Atlanta.

From School Teacher To Great Eminence

A young man who was brought up on a farm in Western Pennsylvania, studied diligently and qualified for district school teacher. Further pursuing his studies and teaching, he managed to save up enough money to put him through medical college. After the Civil War, he began the practice of medicine in the new oil section of Pa., and often rode horse-back thru the woods to reach and relieve those who were seriously ill. He was a student of nature, knew and could easily recognize most of the medicinal plants growing in the woods.

Later, he moved to Buffalo, N. Y., where he launched his favorite remedies, and, in a short time, they were sold by every druggist in the land. Today, the name of this man, Dr. R. V. Pierce, is known throughout the world. His Golden Medical Discovery is the best known blood medicine and tonic. More than fifty million bottles have been sold in the U. S. If your druggist does not sell the Golden Medical Discovery, in liquid or tablets, you can obtain a trial pkg. of the tablets by sending 10c to the Dr. Pierce Clinic, in Buffalo, N. Y.—(adv.)

Twin-Matchin' Contest Mail Jams Constitution Offices

While workers struggled Monday and Tuesday to make inroads into the heaps of mail which descended upon The Constitution in a veritable deluge following closing last Saturday at midnight of the twin-matchin' contest, featured for several weeks in The Constitution's grave section, every mail added to the avalanche. Tuesday's mail came from distant readers, having been postmarked prior to the closing hour last Saturday, and practically every section of the nation was represented in thousands of answers during the past 24 hours.

And the end is not yet—With the slackening in receipts of answers which today will bring, however, some progress may be expected by the dozen or more extra workers engaged in the task of assorting and classifying answers in a unique contest which has reduced the crossword puzzle average and assumed top place in the interest of thousands of readers of The Constitution who have been fascinated with the intriguing and interesting art of matching twins who have appeared in the grave section of this paper over a period of several months.

Throughout Sunday, Monday and Tuesday one could hardly wedge into offices in the grave section, the editorial department and in other spaces required for storage of answers received in the contest. Then came assembling, opening of scores of huge mail pouches and unwrapping of smaller packages containing individual answers. Improvised tables have supplemented desks which have been confiscated for the duration of the classification of answers; department heads have been driven frantic by appropriate orders of "move here and there, typewriter tables and desks, and the art of hurdlung mail sacks, or maintaining ones' equilibrium while scooping 'steep or more set on a slippery package isn't half funny any more."

The interest in the contest has exceeded all expectations. The idea of arranging a number of pages to be run on successive Sundays in The Constitution, novel and interesting as it was, has borne fruit abundantly. And now the task of arranging answers, comparing with the correct solution, awarding prizes—that is next in line. Several days will be required by the present large force to open and arrange for comparisons the immense piles of answers. But this work will go forward without let-up until every answer is opened, careful and personal attention being given to each one, and until the winning answers are selected and prize winners are announced.

U. S. MARINE GUARD TO QUIT NICARAGUA
Washington, January 13.—Withdrawal from Nicaragua of the United States marine guard maintained there has been determined upon.

SUTTON ASSAILS LIQUOR BUYERS

Professor Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of the Atlanta school system, speaking Tuesday at the weekly luncheon of the Atlanta Exchange club at the Henry Grady hotel, charged that every citizen of Atlanta, who, at any time and under any circumstances, purchased "bootleg" liquor, or carried it into his home for other than strictly medicinal use, was a party to "the murder of humanity." He referred particularly, he said, to a sensational double murder and suicide that occurred here a few weeks ago.

Professor Sutton, who was principal speaker at the club's luncheon, also spoke on European affairs. He recently returned from a trip to the continent. In his address, he compared the love of race among Britishers with the same spirit in America. He averred that the Britons were more law-abiding people than the citizens of Atlanta and declared that the hope of America was based upon the love of the race, and he further stated that he deplored the fact that "blind-tiger" liquor and questionable "parties" were bringing ruin to thousands of young American students.

Professor Sutton stressed the importance of agriculture, and said the American people will have to return to the farm and produce like Germany and other countries of Europe are doing. He said he observed no starvation in European countries, and declared he believed the countries involved in the great war should be made to pay their debt to the United States.

France, he said, is amply able to pay what she owes to America and should be made to pay every penny. This is true, with reference to Italy, also, said the speaker, who declared that he had been shown treasures on one floor of the national museum at Naples that were worth enough money to defray the war debt of that nation.

BUCKY ATTRIBUTES SUCCESS TO MOTHER'S ADVICE

Attended Classes at Night And Played Basketball; Developed Mind and Body

This is the fourth installment of the autobiography of Stanley Harris, youngest major league baseball manager in the history of the game, and the victorious strategist and one of the outstanding players in the 1924 world series, in which his Washington club won the pennant for the first time. The rise of Harris from colliery boy to big league manager in eight years is one of the most remarkable life stories America has ever produced.

BY STANLEY BUCKY HARRIS.

Manager World Champion Washington Senators
(Copyright, 1925, by United States and Great Britain by North American Newspaper Syndicate. All rights reserved.)
The work in the office didn't lead to the speedy promotion I expected. Kid-like, I thought I ought to have a more responsible place. I couldn't see myself getting anywhere delivering mail, answering telephone calls and running errands.

"You want to go up too fast, sonny," mother warned me. "A boy can't do a man's work, you know."

After a year as an office boy I was made assistant weighmaster at 30 cents an hour for the nine-hour day. That boosted my weekly envelope to $9.72. I didn't tell mother about the promotion until I brought the first week's wages home to her and laid the money in her lap.

Onions and Tears.
She was peeling onions at the time. Whether the onions were to blame or not, tears ran down her cheeks through her smiles. She hugged me, praised me for being a big man and told me how much help and comfort I was to her. My eyes got wet, too, and it wasn't caused by the onions either. We had ice cream that Sunday at dinner.

As an assistant weighmaster I had to keep a check on the coal leaving the colliery. It was the easiest job I had had. I felt big, holding down such a place and making nearly $10 a week before I was 15 years old.

Nick Stanley was as pleased as if I had been his brother. He told me I would be a mine boss yet if I thought more of work and less about playing baseball. "That money you say these players get must be a mistake—it can't be," he declared. "What they do is not work. They loaf too much. When they are old they know how to do nothing."

I continued at night school in the winter, playing basketball Saturday nights to keep in good condition. Merle had told me to exercise all I could to build up my body. I weighed less than 100 pounds. A professional baseball berth seemed a long way off. Still I held to my dreams.

Mother Gives Encouragement.
Had I been older and known as much as my brother about the obstacles to overcome in reaching a salary place in the sport I wouldn't have been so cocksure. I must have made a nuisance of myself with my talk about some day making good in the major leagues. But finally I made even Nick Stanley believe what I so sincerely believed myself. And that was going some. I did my work without getting any kicks from my bosses, but when I finished work I dreamed baseball and I knew the hating and fielding averages of all the stars of the day.

Mother knew my ambition had not waned. My father had been a pitman for Hughes Jennings in their old semi-professional days in the coal mine district. She saw how far Jennings had come. She encouraged me to keep on when she realized what the game meant to me.

"If you wish a thing as much as I do," she said, "you must have it."

GOODWIN HEADS EDDIE MARTIN 2-MILE ENTRANTS BARRED IN N. Y.

New York, January 13.—While Paavo Nurmi's attempt to erase three more of Joie Ray's world's indoor records will be the outstanding feature of the Municipal Athletic association games and national junior championship meet at Madison Square Garden Thursday night, the title races at 600 and 1,000 yards and two miles are expected to produce unusually keen competition.

The field in the "600" numbers 21, with such outstanding entrants as Paul Herlihy, Georgetown, New England 440-yard champion, and F. A. McGrady, Philadelphia, Middle Atlantic 880-yard champion.

Thirty-three middle-distance runners are entered in the 1,000-yard championship.

Billy Goodwin, New York Athletic association star, who ran a 4:19 mile in the middle relay against the Illinois Athletic association at the Finnish-American Athletic championships games last week, heads the list of 37 entrants in the two-mile run.

New York, January 13.—Eddie (Cannonball) Martin, of Brooklyn, world's bantamweight champion, and his opponent, Alamo, Tenn., in a bout at the Ridgewood Grove Sporting club on January 6, today were suspended until February 1, by the state athletic commission.

The suspension was the result of a match which the commission deemed "unsatisfactory." The bout was stopped by the referee at the end of the third round, when, according to the official fact that a champion had "stalled" in a recognized match.

Martin and Pissano were the attractions at a charity show given by the club, and Martin, it was said today, gave his entire purse to the charity. This fact reduced the term of his suspension, the commission said, but it added that it could not overlook the fact that a champion had "stalled" in a recognized match.

More than 5,000 exhibitors are expected to take part in the sample fair at Milan next April.

Lake Erie yields a larger annual catch of fish than any other body of water in New York state.

PREP ACTION STARTS HERE TONIGHT

BY GORDON KEITH.

The local prep season will get off to a stormy beginning this afternoon when the Boys' High Hurricane entertains the G. M. A. Cadets with a fast round of basketball at the new military building. The game is scheduled to start at 8 o'clock sharp, and since accommodations are rather limited, fans are advised to be on hand in plenty of time to see the opening performance of what promises to be one of the best seasons the preps have ever enjoyed.

Both sides are primed for the fray and a fast get-away game is sure to follow. The "25 prep" season is not to be denied the thrill of home games as they were in football last fall, games a plenty being looked for between Atlanta clubs before tourney times and every battle will be watched with interest, not for its bearing on the standing of the clubs, for it will have none, but for the rivalry and good basketball that meetings of the local clubs invariably produce.

Roughness Eliminated.
In days of old a fast ten-minute free-for-all often accompanied the games, coming usually in the midst of play, but this undesirable, if exciting, feature has been notably absent from prep activities in recent years.

Both clubs have seen action already, and are not just breaking the ice in this meeting. Boys' High having played Gordon and Tech Prep and Freeman, both the Marist and Tech Prep teams, Boys' High did not fare so well against the Barnesville club, it is true, but the game showed up the weak spots and Coach Johnson has been hard at work this week smoothing these blemishes out of his team's play.

The shooting end of the scoring machine was the weakest factor in the team's play with a lack of ability to keep their feet, but the coach has had them in hand for three practice sessions since their initial defeat. Yes, Boys' High club will be a much improved machine this afternoon. Local fans will be anxious to see how both coaches have fared in turning out almost entirely new teams, and today both clubs will certainly get a real test of their strength.

A. made a remarkably good showing against her two foes considering the brief practices the squad has had, and Coach Morrow's men bid fair to put in a much stronger bid for the honor than early reports indicated. The club had no trouble at all in sailing through Marietta, and although their former teammate proved a stumbling block in the first game, the Cadet five played a good game.

UNDAUNTED RAP IS DERBY WINNER

Grand Junction, Tenn., January 13.—Undaunted Rap, a pointer, owned by Doyle Henderson, Alamo, Tenn., repeated his performance in the derby championship of the All-American club last week, first he took first place in derby of the United States field trials here today.

Mo Gold, setter, belonging to G. F. Meier, Kansas City, Mo., was the runner-up and the pointer, Evan's Speedy Lady, owned by C. F. Hart, Metz of Evansville, Ind., was third.

Undaunted Rap, Mo Gold, Evan's Speedy Lady and Fisher's Mary Popie, the property of U. R. Fisher, Hope Ind., were the dogs in the final series.

Undaunted Rap being paired with Fisher's Mary Popie, who made an unusual showing yesterday.

There was little to choose between the two dogs in speed and range but the Tennessee pointer made two clean points on bevis. The setter, Mo Gold, also found bevis in his final race.

The setter, Princess Doreen, owned by H. D. Whitaker of Cincinnati, Ohio, might have placed as the result of her race today had she found bevis.

The derby had 25 starters.

Philip M. Essig, of Atlanta, is acting as one of the judges.

SPAIN TO PROSECUTE IBANEZ FOR PAMPHLET

Madrid, January 13.—A district judge has ordered Vicente Blasco Ibanez committed to prison unconditionally and has demanded 10,000 pesetas as a cash bond to guarantee his financial obligations.

The case against Ibanez for the publication of his booklet against King Alfonso is being pressed in the absence of the author from the country. It is generally believed that his extradition will be asked.

TY COBB'S LIFE STORY

Chapter LII.—Kaleidoscopic Changing Moods—Heights of Optimism—Depths of Pessimism.

BY H. G. SALSINGER.

Ty Cobb has always lived in moods. He would change from the happy and gay to the gloomy and morose. Sometimes he was a mate for Pollyanna, at other times a fit companion for a hypochondriac.

There were times when he wondered what it was all about and what use it could be. On one of these occasions he said:

"If I had my life to live over again I would be a surgeon instead of a ball player. I think I could have done a great deal of good in surgery. I would have been of some deep use to humanity."

At other times he decided he would quit baseball. Often, in the last five years, did Cobb seriously consider leaving the game. He intended to settle down, fish, hunt, read and enjoy life.

Changing Moods.
"Down south we know how to live," he would say. "Down south there is not the hustle, the bustle, the tear and wear that you find in the north. We get something out of life down there. We know what home is and where; in the north, most people believe that they have it, but they don't. We know what a thing down south is. We know how to relax, to get down there and we know how to relax. There is not the bustle and strife for the dollar that you find in the north. Tell me, what do they get out of life—these people that are fighting for—these people that few of them ever get? They grow old and helpless long before their time and when they have passed their usefulness what have they got? What do they get out of life even if they do succeed in getting money? By the time they accumulate their fortunes they don't know how to enjoy the money."

At other times he would say: "When I quit baseball, which will be very soon, I shall depart with a very deep regret, and that is that I have done no real good to humanity. I suppose everybody will have forgotten me in a few years' time."

In recent years he often tired of baseball, as this observation by Cobb shows:

"I am fed up with this continual strain. I am tired of it all. All the ambitions I had when I broke into professional baseball down in Augusta in 1904 have been satisfied. Yes, I have achieved more in baseball than I set out to achieve. Now I can go back and settle down and get something really worth while out of my life. Year after year he made up his mind to quit. At the age of 32 he said it was his last year. Then another season and another farewell resolution. But he was still playing daily six years after his first resolve to quit.

"Thirty-five is the age limit for professional baseball men in the big leagues," he said at 32. "When a man reaches that age he loses his vigor, his pep and his speed. I am not at all top form now. Since 1911 I have gradually let down.

"After a ball player reaches 30 he becomes methodical. I have become methodical and today I find myself doing out each play before I make it, with a view to conserving as much energy as possible."

"Most of the success I am having is due to psychology. I apply it constantly. For instance, when the Tigers are leading and the opportunity presents itself often take chances making a freak play or stealing a base when there is no necessity for it. I create a series of mental hazards for the opposing team that causes the player to fumble nine times out of 10 on a similar play that may follow."

"When I was in the flush of youth I could play all day and all night without tiring, but now I find that as the years creep along my stamina weakens. I can no longer make the plays I used to make."

Grows More Difficult.
Fire belongs to youth, and even with Cobb, in whom the flames burned longer than in the average mortal, it became more and more difficult to stir the embers.

"Baseball is a hard, nerve-racking life when you do the game for all it is worth. There is no rest when you are weary and the travel is tiresome."

He wanted to have time to read. He likes books, as he likes pictures and music and other works of art. He appreciates fine phrasing. The play of words has a fascination for Cobb.

And he likes biography. He has read nearly all the biographies of Napoleon. He has engaged in reading the biographies of the illustrious Bonaparte during the winter seasons. The greatest character in the world's history, in Cobb's opinion, was Napoleon, with Julius Caesar next. And it would be difficult to say that his biographical study did not have powerful influence over Cobb's career. He, probably, would be the last to say that it did not.

Pegler Advises Grid Coaches To Cut Down on Literature

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

New York, January 13.—When William T. Peden quits tournament tennis to go about the game, hampered by any of the rules of amateur sport, he will set an example that most of the football coaches in this country would do well to follow.

Barrening their profession. The gain to literature will hardly equal the loss to tennis in the case of Peden's choice. The ratio would be about the same if H. G. Wells should forswear the fountain pen, the typewriter, the spelling books or whatever it is that he uses to express himself in letters, and devote himself exclusively to tennis. But Tilden's sincerity is not to be questioned any more.

The urge to express things in print has become a necessity in sport and competition to obtain exclusive "signatures" of celebrities. Zuppke, the amateur and professional fields has developed absurd situations. When Jess Willard was about to divide through 10 rounds with Frank Moran in New York in 1916, the literary horse-trader refused to compose one of those just-before-the-battle statements for one newspaper organization because he was under contract to deliver his entire output to another.

This was not very embarrassing to the writer of the words, it is true, for the reporter in the case went ahead and wrote 50 words about "the sink of condition" anyway and made a cash bond to sound as though it came right from Willard himself, but it showed the ingratitude of a man whose fortune was made by free publicity.

Zuppke Changes Mind.
During the recent meeting of the Football Coaches' association in New York, the subject of literary coaches was mentioned to Bob Zuppke, the new president of the body, which at the time was patting itself on the shoulder-blades and telling the citizenry what an ethical, unselfish trade was theirs. Zuppke couldn't see that there was likely to be anything evil about contributing to the prints until he was asked to put the board of directors of the chamber of commerce at 12:30 o'clock today at the chamber building.

C. O. Bickelhaup, vice president of the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph company, will be principal speaker at a meeting of the board of directors of the chamber of commerce at 12:30 o'clock today at the chamber building.

Deane Newton, the new chairman of the board of directors of the Federal Reserve bank, will be honor guest. Mr. Newton comes to Atlanta from Jacksonville exclusive syndicated stories. Andson, Miss.

FORT BENNING ENCOUNTERS A. A. C.

Coach Ben's Atlanta Athletic club basketball players will play the strong Fort Benning officers from Columbus tonight at 8:30 o'clock on the city auditorium court.

The officers have a well-balanced club and several former college and high school stars appear on the Benning lineup.

The Athletic club has won games over Mississippi Aggies and Georgia Tech. The A. A. C. team defeated Tech only one point, but Tech played a much better game than was expected.

Tumors around basketball circles in Atlanta have it that Ed Gurr, former Georgia star forward who has been practicing with the locals for the past two weeks, will get into the Tech tonight. He has been playing mighty good basketball during the recent practices.

Joe Singleton will be seen at his old position at forward with Pat Stephens, former Boys' High star, at the other forward position. Joe Bennett will play center with Captain Sullivan and Ferrell at the guard positions. Gurr will very likely get a chance at one of the forward positions before the game is over.

The playing of Pat Stephens during the recent games has caused quite a bit of high praise from basketball fans. He was the star in the Tech game and also in the Mississippi Aggie game. Joe Bennett has also been playing a neat game at guard and his defensive playing under the baskets has aided the clubbers very materially in holding down the opposing scores.

FLOWERS MAKES UNIQUE RECORD

New York, January 13.—Tiger Flowers, colored fighter of Atlanta, who met Jack Delaney, conqueror of Paul Berlenbach, in a 12-round bout at Madison Square Garden next Friday night, has been recording some unique records in the gloving-slinging line.

Manager Walk Miller points out that the latest sensation in fistic circles was scheduled to meet Delaney since December 1, but being of a nervous disposition, 28 rounds of one-sided fighting was all that the cash customers were permitted to see.

With the exception of Frankie School of Buffalo, all of the Tiger's opponents commended with King Mo'rhous. Frankie managed to stick it out before a home-town crowd a day after Christmas, being out on his feet twice during six rounds that were decidedly sprinkled with Flowers.

Flowers stopped Battling Gaehe in two rounds; Johnny Wilson in three rounds; Jack Townsend in five rounds; Joe Lohman in three rounds; Billy Britton in four rounds and Dan O'Dowd in five rounds.

The Delaney match will be the fourth time Flowers has answered the going since 1925 was ushered in, the Miller entry having met Lohman, Britton and O'Dowd in a week. Incidentally, during 1924, Flowers won over half of his battles via the knockout route.

Immediately after the Delaney match, Flowers plans to pay a flying visit to his old home, Brunswick, Ga., where a monster reception awaits him. The mayor and leading citizens will welcome their fighting deacon, who is bringing fame to the little seaport town.

Cracks in the dome of the cathedral of St. Peter's, at Rome, are to be repaired this year.

Coach Fisher Will Remain In Charge During '25 Season; Daly Also Starred in Army

Cambridge, Mass., January 13.—Official confirmation of reports that Harvard is seeking the services of Major Charles D. Daly, former Crimson and Army quarterback star, to aid in rehabilitating football at the university, was contained in a statement issued today by Malcolm J. Logan, chairman of the graduate football advisory committee, and Fred W. Moore, graduate treasurer of athletics.

While denying that the Harvard Athletic association had taken the initiative in steps to have Major Daly assigned to the Harvard department of military science as assistant professor, the statement admitted that the athletic authorities had discussed the possible advisory capacity in which Major Daly might be willing to act if the war department details him to duty at Harvard.

Beyond the formal pronouncement, no Crimson official would discuss the general coaching situation and rumors that Robert T. Fisher, head coach for six years, would remain in that capacity for the 1925 season met with neither confirmation nor denial.

WEEKS ASSIGNS DUTY TO HARVARD.
Washington, January 13.—Secretary Weeks announced today that Major Charles D. Daly would be assigned to duty at Harvard university in June to take charge of the reserve officers' training work there.

Secretary Weeks was asked by the Harvard athletic committee to detail Major Daly as assistant to the professor of military science at Harvard, but he found it impossible to grant the request in the form it was presented. Major Daly at present is assigned to the 70th Field Artillery at the Presidio, Monterey, Cal., and will be ordered to Cambridge in time to begin his work there next June.

ROCKNE DENIES CALIFORNIA OFFER

Ogden, Utah, January 13.—Coach Knute Rockne, of the Notre Dame football team, was in Ogden for a short time today on his way east from California and took occasion to deny reports that he was even considering a coaching offer from the University of Southern California. "It's all news to me," he said, and added that he had a 10-year contract at Notre Dame and only one year of that contract had expired.

U. S. C. WANTS N. D. GAMES.
San Francisco, January 13.—The University of Southern California is not making any special effort to sign Knute Rockne, Notre Dame university football coach, as coach, but is anxious to put through negotiations for a series of two "home-and-home" games with Rockne's outfit. H. J. Stonier, secretary and treasurer of the southern institution, said here today.

"We understand that Rockne is tied up with Notre Dame for a long period of years," Stonier said, "and that he is well satisfied with his present berth. We did not see any possibility of getting him as a coach, but we did take up with him the possibility of Southern California meeting Notre Dame in Chicago late in October or early in December of 1925 and of Notre Dame playing a return game in Southern California in 1926. He gave us some encouragement."

'Little Miss Georgia.'

(At the Lyric Theater.)

The center of interest in the Lyric players' whirlwind farce comedy, this week is "Little Miss Georgia," the adorable walking, talking, weeping, life-sized doll that can be procured either at a surprisingly low cash price or without cost under a plan that will be explained to anyone who asks at the circulation department.

When a near-sighted man with a real baby at rehearsing forced abandonment of the play to use a real one in the show, "Little Miss Georgia" was introduced to the cast by Miss Lockett to meet the emergency and she has played the part to everyone's entire satisfaction at every performance.

'Their First Baby.'

(At the Lyric Theater.)

"Their First Baby" is responsible for the cyclones of laughter that are swirling out of the Lyric theater each night this week and at Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday matinees. The remarkable farce comedy of proud parents and careless practical jokers is keeping the crowds in a continuous uproar of laughter. Lorraine Bernard flashes a comedy make-up as an Irish nurse-maid that has evidenced her old-time play as a laugh producer. Here is the funniest role of the 12 uproariously funny roles of the play. Fred Raymond and Edith Lockett, as a couple of insanely proud parents of their first baby, are more than delightful. The action moves so swiftly that one laugh begins where the last one ended. Everyone who has seen the play has declared it to be a surprising success. It may be seen any night this week or at Thursday or Saturday matinees.

Last Time, Today.

(At Keith's Forsyth.)

Today presents the last three opportunities for patrons of Keith's Forsyth theater to get in on the laugh feast being produced the first three days of this week in the act of Harry Johnson, celebrated operatic black-face comedian, who is headlining the excellent program.

A special added attraction also is included in the bill the Louie Bowers singing and dancing revue, and more.

Loew's Vaudeville.

(At Loew's Grand.)

Teddy, the wrestling bear, and the two comedians who work with this unusual animal are a regular knock-out at Loew's Grand theater this week. The act brings more laughter than has been heard in a long time. Another headliner on the bill is the Hubert Kinney revue, which offers some really sensational dance steps by a beauty chorus that is one of the prettiest of the kind in the city. The revue is a real gem of the season. A. H. Wilson, the natural comedian, hits his stride in his concentration of nonsensicalities and witticisms. He gets over some great comedy and some clever songs. Two other splendid acts complete the raucous end of the program. Tom Mix is the star of the feature photoplay, "The Heart Buster."

'Simon Called Peter.'

(Coming to the Atlanta.)

The most recent of theatrical offerings is a dramatization of the famous Robert Keble novel, "Simon Called Peter," which will be presented at the Atlanta theater for one week commencing Monday, January 19, with matinees Wednesday and Saturday. To those of us who have never read "Simon Called Peter," let us state in the beginning that it is one of the best novels the war has brought us. Mr. Keble has drawn with unerring touch the characters that we have in our mind's eye, and yet know so little of. He has drawn them not with the mud and blood of the trenches fresh upon them, but he shows them to us in their leisure moments, far from the noise of the big guns, trying to forget that at any moment they might be sent up to die. "Simon Called Peter" will be presented here by the same great metropolitan company that played Chicago for three months and Baltimore for five weeks, where the critics and public proclaimed it to be one of the best of the season, and will include Bettie Wales as "Julie," the nurse, Charles Warburton as the "Rev. Peter Graham" and Andrew Roudel as Madeleine, the French girl. The scenic production will be brought here complete and will include the realistic air raid said to be so real that one imagines oneself in the midst of a battle in the air.

Mail orders may be sent in now. The box office seat sale starts tomorrow (Thursday) morning.

'Isn't Life Wonderful.'

(At the Howard.)

Love's ability to thrive on potatoes and to conquer misery and despair is the theme of D. W. Griffith's latest (film play, "Isn't Life Wonderful?" which is the attraction at the Howard this week. The film was made in Germany. It has been declared by critics to be the most appealing love story ever screened, even by Griffith. Carlos Dumpester and Neil Hamilton are the two leading characters.

'Sandra.'

(At the Metropolitan.)

Barbara La Marr in "Sandra," the First National picture, "emoted" all of her big scenes to sideline music.

Speaking of his triumphal efforts in behalf of Miss La Marr, Somers ventured the assertion that this star responded to his music better than any player for whom he has worked.

'The Fast Worker.'

(At the Rialto.)

Catalina, famous island resort, is the locale for "The Fast Worker." Universal's latest Reginald Denny picture, La Plante vehicle, now playing at the Rialto theater. A notable cast is seen in the new feature, including Lee Moran, Richard Tucker, T. D. Crittenden, Clarence Selwynne, Muriel Frances Dana and others.

The program also includes a new telephone girl comedy called "The Square Sex," Pathé News and a William Whitney Hubner musical offering.

The next of these matches will be held on the night of February 26, probably at the Biltmore. Only dogs of less than twelve months of age will be eligible, and handsome silver cups will be awarded for the best of all the more popular breeds. It is not necessary to hold membership in the kennel club in order to enter a pup in these matches; neither is it necessary for your pup to be registered.

JOHN DOVE IS NAMED STATE G. O. P. ADVISER

John B. Dove, of 657 Highland avenue, has been appointed state political adviser for the republican party in Georgia, according to a message received here today from the governor. Mr. Dove said that he knew nothing of the details of the office, but was wired a tentative acceptance.

There are many matters to be considered, Mr. Dove said. "We expect to open an office in Atlanta in the near future. Our purpose will be to establish the republican party on a firmer basis in Georgia and to take an active interest in state politics. At this time, I am not acquainted with the details of the present appointment."

WILLIAM S. HART PROUD OF HIS SON, IGNORES EX-WIFE

Los Angeles, January 13.—William S. Hart, rider of the plains and desert in film dramas, laid aside the picture business to return to his home for more conventional efforts to appear in court here to assist the efforts of his former wife, Winifred Westover, to break a separation agreement made several years ago.

The agreement established a trust fund of $103,500 for Mrs. Hart and similar sum for her son, William, Jr., with the clause that she abandon her screen pursuits. She now seeks to rescind the agreement and return to her former place before the camera, because, she alleges, the sum is insufficient to keep her.

Throughout the day the principals sat within a few paces of each other without exchanging glances, but the "two-gun man" of the films occasionally looked admiringly at the little son who was born after the separation.

BAR ASSOCIATION MEETING CLOSES

After a brief session Tuesday the executive committee of the American Bar association, holding its mid-winter meeting here, adjourned. The majority of the members departed for their homes during the afternoon. Secretary Hughes planning to be at his desk in Washington at noon today.

Another meeting of the committee will take place in New York City in the spring, the exact time not being set.

Larger Federal Salaries.

The final session Tuesday was taken up with granting an extra appropriation to the committee in charge of the campaign to secure larger salaries for federal judges. An extensive report on this subject will be presented at the next annual convention.

Expressions of gratitude to the Atlanta Bar association for the hospitality and courtesies shown by the committee were adopted in a resolution. Another resolution conveyed the sympathy of the committee to the family and friends of Alexander W. Smith, Sr., who died suddenly Monday night while attending a dinner in honor of the committee.

These business sessions of the mid-winter meeting included reports from various sections and committees of the association regarding their budget needs for the remainder of the year, together with the choosing of a convention city for 1925. Detroit was selected, the dates being September 2, 3 and 4.

Special committees were also appointed to consider the alleged abuse of banking laws and the raising of funds for the compilation of a model code of criminal procedure. Dr. William Alexander, dean of the law school of the University of Pennsylvania, meeting with a special committee, devoted attention to the bill pending in congress to prepare an index and digest of federal laws.

Washington, January 13.—Tests of "sancrocin," a treatment for tuberculosis discovered by a Dane, now being made on calves under the direction of the national hygienic laboratories of the United States public health service, will be continued several months. Until the treatment has proved effective with both animals and human beings, public health officials will make no comment on the treatment's value.

Belle Isle Makes Offer to Furnish Autos for City

An offer of A. L. Belle Isle, president of the Atlanta Baggage & Cab company, to furnish automobiles for all city employees which have need of cars, will be considered by city council Monday.

While Mr. Belle Isle's letter, which is on file in the office of City Clerk Walter C. Taylor, names no specific amounts for this service, he claims that the city would be saved a substantial sum annually, as hiring of cars from his company would eliminate all unnecessary expense and would save cost of equipment as well as depreciation.

At present, it is estimated, automobiles used by heads of departments and other employees cost the city approximately $90,000 a year.

A similar proposal was made by a local taxicab company about two years ago, but was voted down by council.

GERMAN NATIONALISM IS ALARMING FRANCE

Paris, January 13.—(By the Associated Press.)—The slate for the new German cabinet being formed by Dr. Hans Luther, as published here this morning has given rise to considerable anxiety in official circles. The German tendency toward nationalism which the cabinet's makeup shows, takes in connection with the German promising attitude of the Germans on commercial relations with France is regarded by French officials as auguring badly for Franco-German relations as a whole.

25 DEGREE WEATHER SLATED EARLY TODAY

Atlanta is slated for several days of fair weather," Mr. Herrmann said. "It will be cool enough to be snappy. The outlook for the country generally is fair with colder weather. The blanket of frost is expected to reach into northern Florida."

SCOUT EXECUTIVE TELLS KIWANIS OF SCOUT WORK

"Character is the by-product of a worthy cause made personal. A man grows in character not by the number of servants he hires, but by the service he performs himself. A boy, developing in service, grows into character."

This epitomizes the objective of the Boy Scout movement put into action by the Atlanta Kiwanis club at its Tuesday luncheon at the Ansley hotel by Ray O. Wyland, director of the educational movement of the Boy Scouts of America, in Atlanta attending the regional scout meeting. He presented the subject of scouting from the viewpoint of the man.

"Scouting," he said, "binds with a band of friendship the hearts of the boys just as Kiwanis binds the hearts of the men."

With the scout movement being organized in 36 nations, he said, the camaraderie of these boys of the various countries, bound together by the same principles, the same ideals, constitutes the greatest movement for world peace in operation today.

Mr. Wyland told his hearers that only the lack of sufficient man leadership is holding back the scout movement, there being today only 154,000 adult volunteer leaders, permitting the taking into the organization of only 625,000 new boys every three years, whereas 1,000,000 boys come within the scout age every year.

John Candler, son of Asa Warren Candler, an eagle scout and senior patrol leader of Troop 11, Atlanta honor troop for 1924, gave the club a brief but stirring talk on scouting from the viewpoint of the boy. He told how the work of the organization to the beginner looks like all fun, but that it turns out to be a great movement of character building.

Waldo Jones, son of President Robert H. Jones, Jr., and one of the youngest members of Troop 11, recalled scout and the code of allegiance to the flag.

C. A. GREEN HEADS ARCADE MERCHANTS

Fifty members of the Arcade Co-operative association, comprising tenants of the Peachtree arcade, gathered Tuesday night at the Chamber of Commerce assembly rooms in their annual meeting. The Arcade Co-operative association is a part of the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association, of which C. V. Hohenstein is executive secretary.

M. RICH & BROS. COMPANY

The January Sales Are Going Busily

Are You Sharing in These Genuine Opportunities?

Penelope Sees the Silks

—Speaking of silks... have you been to Rich's? There's the annual January Silk Sale, and what a Silk Sale! A divine splash of color, a gleam of incomparable fabrics, and values that mean a sparkle in the eye of the most cynical shopper! Who can describe the swish of silk, the glamor of a thousand rainbows, the fascination and allure of gleaming materials? Not a "Silk Sale," but rather "Bargains in Beauty!"

A Desert Princess

—would pale with pleasure, confronted with those stripes, glowing with all the splendor of desert sunsets! A Watteau shepherdess would love the diaphanous chiffons, tinted with the delicacy of a butterfly wing and scattered with nosegays! Piquant prints! Fascinating foulards! Your fingers ache for a needle! Your ears long for the "Whir-r-r" of a sewing machine!

I Saw Myself

—In crisp tub silks, fresh as a sea breeze... a "slinky" success (and I am quite pudgy) in sleek satin, requesting lemon for my tea... and again, the cynosure of all eyes, in gold brocade. Ah-h-h-h and then some! Yard after yard of the gorgeous stuffs found refuge in my arms. Fancy exchanging bank-notes (quite small and dirty at that) for yards of romance and breath-taking beauty! But, you can... really... at Rich's.

Penelope Looks at Linens

—Fragile china, the gleam of silver, thin-sliced lemon, like little moons, the celestial odor of tea... and linen... glistening, dazzling, so white that samite would look gray beside it, that is—linen. The mark of royalty; the robes of kings, were Tyrian purple and fine linen. That was because, in the old days, it was so rare, so expensive, that only kings could afford it. But the old order changes. Linen is no longer a luxury, it is a necessity! And in the reach of the slimmest purse... at Rich's.

Far Countries

—have laid their riches at your feet. Russia sent its flax, Irish colleens wove it into gleaming fabric, patient hands in Czecho-Slovakia, Italy, the Madeira Islands and China, fashioned it into glistening table-linen, smooth sheets, decorative tea-cloths, centerpieces and dresser-scarfs. Frosty fillet lace, Italian cut-work, the incomparable embroidery of Rome, all lend their charm and beauty, to make its perfection.

Our Grandmothers

—knew and loved... linen. They prided themselves on snow-piled shelves, lavender-scented. Who has not thrilled at the touch of cool, white sheets; has remained passive at the frosty expanse of a perfectly arranged table? Rich's Linen Section is a paradise for young brides, discriminating matrons, charming hostesses, in fact—all those who combine beauty with common-sense economy! This... is the Linen Sale at Rich's!

Sure Way To Get Rid of Blackheads

There is one simple, safe and sure way that never fails to get rid of blackheads, that is to dissolve them. To do this get two ounces of calomel powder from any drug store—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub over the blackheads briskly—wash the parts and you will be surprised how the blackheads have disappeared. Big blackheads, little blackheads, no matter where they are, almost dissolve and disappear. Blackheads are a mixture of dust and dirt and secretions that form in the pores of the skin. The calomel powder and the water dissolve the blackheads as they wash right out, leaving the pores free and clean and in their natural condition.—(adv.)

NEW MODES for SOUTHERN PLAYLAND

Visions of sunny skies and golden sands, of waters blue, of stately palms that softly murmur their delight when kissed by tropic breezes—and everywhere the radiance of colorful bloom!

These Springtime Frocks Are Poems of Color

Here are fashions whose vivid loveliness brings visions of sunny climes. Planned by designers of world-fame, here are models that point the way to the fashions to come.

The Dresses

The demure simplicity of plain flannels or crepes and the exotic coloring of boldly printed designs are equally attractive.

New and quite exquisite are flat crepes showing elaborate cut and eyelet work, all by hand.

Sport flannels in one and two-piece effects are striped in broad two-tone colorings.

Short, sleeveless coats, trimmed with many buttons, are worn with matching dress of flannel. Very summer-like are delightful models of voile and lace combined.

Ensemble Costumes

Charming revelations of the new styles for spring are these models of Kasha, French flannels and combinations, with gaily printed silk crepes.

A long coat of black—crepe romaine edged with fur "half reveals and half conceals" a dress of printed flat crepe.

Long sleeveless coats of bengaline button full length down the back over dresses of gayest printed crepe. The varied models are happy combinations of utmost simplicity and ultra-smartness of design.

A Delightful Surprise in Prices

No previous season, we believe, has offered so much of charm and beauty of style at such modest prices.

Dresses, $25.00, $29.75 to $79.50.

Ensembles, $49.50 to $225.00.

SLAMS SALAAMS

By Louise Dooly

THERE are many organizations and countless conferences about outwarring war.

There is more talk about it and more printed matter than all other evils put together.

But do you remember what Mark Twain said about the weather? That he had heard people grumbling about it all his life, but so far as he could see, nobody ever did anything about it.

COMMON SENSE NOT THE FASHION.

"I AM in favor of married people trying to make each other happy. It is not law that rules life but how you rule yourself."

It was an Englishwoman lawyer now visiting in this country who made this common-sense remark; one so obvious, so reasonable that it would seem a mere platitude for the sake of saying something, if it were not common knowledge that this sort of common sense is not by any means universal among married people.

We heard a sermon Sunday on a text just as axiomatic; namely, that all the social ills with which the world is suffering are due simply to non-conformity with the commandments of God. And yet—think of the plausibility of those who would substitute something more modern; something "bigger and better."

To return to the Englishwoman, Mrs. Helena Normanston, the first woman to win a place at the bar in England; she puts another aspect, and an interesting one, on the problem. Should a woman when married, go on with her job outside the home?

The most vital argument advanced in this country against married women continuing in business is that they are reluctant to bear children because it means giving up their jobs.

"The situation in England now," says Mrs. Normanston, "is that middle-class women are not having children because they cannot afford them. Much better that a wife should go out and make enough to bring up one or two children properly, than that she should stay at home and have no children at all."

It's a problem either way.

A PREMIUM ON TRUTH.

THERE is a delicious humor in the prospect of students of northern universities delving in books and hunting down traditions to prove the truths of the history of the Confederacy.

Bernard Baruch did a shrewd, and at the same time a generous thing, when he endowed the United Daughters of the Confederacy in order that they might offer annual prizes to northern schools for such research work.

He made the gift reverently in honor of his mother, but at the same time he must have had his tongue in his cheek when he envisioned northern youth busy over the real facts of the story of the Confederacy.

It wouldn't be a bad plan for somebody to offer prizes in the south for the southerner providing northern listeners or readers with the greatest amount of constructive information as to the south. This might furnish a needed impetus to southerners to post themselves more thoroughly concerning the things of their home land, they may well be proud of.

At the same time they could not avoid having emphasized to their own consciences those facts or conditions about the south of which they might not have any reason to be proud.

The first thing necessary in remedying any evil is to have the facts. Also—

We are not nearly so apt to correct our faults—personal or communal.

nity faults—if we think they are comfortably invisible.

TEXAS DARES.

TEXAS, when she takes to the water, disdains a mere wetting of her feet. She plunges right in to the neck.

Having elected a woman governor, she swears in three women as justices of her supreme court to hear an important case, from which the regular incumbents are barred from action because of membership in the organization involved.

The three women judges are Texas lawyers.

CHIVALRY IN POLITICS.

THE state assembly of North Carolina the same week says its welcome to its first woman member with flowers. Miss Julia Alexander, of Charlotte, a successful lawyer, whom she takes her seat among the solons, finds that North Carolina's chivalry is just as graciously on the job when North Carolina's beauty goes in for politics.

WILL THEY FOOL THE WOMEN?

A CONCERTED effort is to be made this season to substitute American fashions, designs and fabrics for French, in the good graces of the women of America, so the news tells us.

The spokesmen for the National Garment Retailers' association, which will sponsor a spring fashion show this month in New York, this exhibition to be moved later to other centers of population, give out the information, and Franklin Simon, president of the association, tells something of the retailers' plan for bringing about this "reform."

He credits the long supremacy of the French costumers primarily to the close accord between the fabric makers and the costume designers, this harmony being so pronounced that it is hard to tell which follows the other.

That is doubtless one of the reasons for the success of French fashions, but there are others he does not mention, notably the absence of a certain sort of commercialism in the work of the French designers.

Oh, no. We are not attempting to deny that the Parisian designer demands the full worth for his product.

But he gives of his utmost.

There exists still this contrast between the French and American workmanship, even on gowns and hats: the French dressmaker, the French milliner, looks on his work as an art, and he puts the devotion of the artist into his output. He would actually rather not sell his best creations to the American prospect who appreciates the label in the gown but not the taste in its design. He creates beauty and primarily for the price it will bring, but for the happiness of creating.

The American designer still looks on such an attitude as tomfoolery.

When the American designer and customer gets over this attitude, then will the American woman of taste and judgment switch her preference to the American costumer. But not till then.

Her pocketbook to some extent controls her purchases, but her brains prefer the art of the French, and she is going to use her brains whether she can stretch her pocketbook that far.

The American customer can't blame her for it. He wants value received himself and gets it.

Speakers at Woman's Club Tell of Foreign Conditions

Mrs. B. M. Boykin, chairman of international relationship committee of the Atlanta Woman's club, who presided at the meeting and luncheon at the Atlanta Woman's club Tuesday, at which international problems were featured.

International relations, international questions and international conditions were the timely subjects of discussion at a brilliant luncheon held at the Atlanta Woman's club, Tuesday, when more than a hundred women were called together by Mrs. B. M. Boykin, who represents the International Relations department of the club.

Many of Atlanta's most brilliant speakers were seated at the speakers' table and responded to the introductions with words of much interest and instruction.

Mrs. Boykin presided over the luncheon as the official hostess of the occasion. Seated at her right was Mrs. Norman Sharp, president of the club, who was first presented and spoke with enthusiasm of the splendid cooperation of this department of the club was receiving and predicted great things for its future.

Mrs. Clifford Walker spoke of the splendid work that this committee had done for its members and how fortunate for Atlanta that it was so well organized and ready to carry on its activities. She then presented Mrs. Walter Sims, who responded with words of appreciation of such a splendid gathering and for such a splendid cause.

Mrs. Sherman's Message. Messages were read from Mrs. Sherman, president of the General Federation of Women's clubs, expressing her appreciation of the consideration given by this committee to the vital questions of international relations and sending her hearty greetings to the Atlanta women.

Mrs. Boykin also read a message received from Mrs. Alice Ames Winter, past president of the General Federation and at present the chairman of international relations for the General Federation. Mrs. Winter's message was as follows: "Congratulations."

Make the world without prejudice or hysteria, but with wider understanding and sympathy with the peoples of all nations as a contribution to stability of the world."

Mrs. Winter's significant message was indeed the keynote of the occasion, for without hesitation, those women, who knew the conditions existing here and elsewhere, rose to respond to their introductions, with the knowledge they had gathered by actual observation, and placing it before others who had studied the questions and conditions with the same understanding, hoping in some way to aid in bringing about the thing that is in every woman's heart, that of world peace.

Mrs. Albert Thornton, discussing conditions in the old country, showed that today in a palace in Geneva the third opium conference was being held to try and rid the world of the awful curse of the dreaded drug.

"This first conference," said Mrs. Thornton, "was held by eight nations; when the second was held the United States joined its force and it seemed at that time that nothing could be done to curtail the production of the drug, because the sympathy of the nations could not be procured, but it was predicted that the present conference would find that England and France and other nations have been interested in wiping out this menace that each year from now on there would be 10 per cent reduction in the production of the drug, and the old countries for medicine would be so scrutinized as the result of public sentiment that any nation would hesitate to tolerate its being marketed in its borders."

Mrs. Thornton also spoke of $800,000,000 for the relief of the Armenians and Greeks of its territory, stating that America had assumed $10,000,000 and Greece $10,000,000, England assuming the rest, hoping to rehabilitate these unfortunate nations.

F. O. Foster, president of the Tourist bureau for Atlanta, was a guest, and told something of the plans for bringing the tourists here by making it attractive enough to persuade them to include Atlanta in their itineraries.

Advocates Hands Off. Mrs. Hamilton Douglas took as her theme the political situation in other countries. Her urgent advice was to take warning and stay out of family difficulties. Mrs. Douglas thinks that the old countries can fight their own battles, save their own money, manage their own affairs without any interference and her advice is to let them do so.

Mrs. Carl Hutcheson gave a good account of prohibition conditions existing in many of the foreign countries. She said that in Sweden the liquor trade is controlled by the government and coupons are issued by which the holders may purchase a certain amount of strong drink. These coupons are withdrawn if offenses are committed. "In Norway," said Mrs. Hutcheson, "the law is very much as it is here, but it works very poorly. In Denmark it is the same as in Sweden." The speaker attributed the few cases of intoxication seen over there to the fact that they were so accustomed to the use of light wines, beers, etc., that they were not like the Americans and did not try to drink it all at once.

Mrs. Kathryn Connart spoke at length of her travels abroad and the wonders of the old country. She told

The supreme court Tuesday denied a new trial sought by Raymond Sisson, an Atlanta youth, who was given a sentence of from 12 to 20 years following conviction in the Fulton superior court on a charge of robbing the Foote & Davies printing plant of $10,000 in tobacco stamps.

In his petition for a new trial, Sisson contended through his attorneys that a deputy sheriff asked that he be searched for weapons when he was arrested and claimed that this act was prejudicial to his case. The supreme court declined to uphold this contention.

General Federation Board Meets at Capital Today

BY THOMAS L. STOKES.
Washington, D. C., January 13.—(Special).—Projects for general improvement of standards of American life, especially in the home and among women in industry, will be discussed Wednesday at the opening session of the meeting of the board of directors of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, which is authorized to transmit business for the 300,000 members of the organization throughout the country.

Sixty-five members of the board, including the national officers, state and territorial directors, as well as heads of departments of the federation, are expected to attend. In addition, each state federation president has been invited to attend the sessions as an associate member of the board of directors.

Citizenship Training.
Outstanding in the projects to be brought before the board by Mrs. John Dickinson Sherman, president of the general federation, is the situation respecting the conference proposed for citizenship training. This proposal has been placed before President Coolidge with the request that a committee be called by him. It is fostered by the general federation and is so closely related to immigration as to be worthy of a presidential conference to work out its problems.

The federation also places it on the same plane in importance with such subjects as farm economics, unemployment and recreation. Conferring in methods and principles adopted by organizations engaged in citizenship training activities is signaled out by the federation as one of the chief reasons for the necessity of appointment by the president of a conference committee on this subject. Home improvement, generally, child labor and other subjects will be topics of discussion at the meeting.

Tuesday was devoted by the arriving members to various committee meetings and to making arrangements for the transaction of business at the session tomorrow.

Wednesday's Program.
The program Wednesday morning calls for reports from Mrs. John Dickinson Sherman, president, and from the two vice presidents, the treasurer and from the executive committee. During the afternoon reports from the director of headquarters, and from the headquarters and house committee, as well as from the membership committee, are on the program. The board will be entertained at tea by Mrs. John N. Spool, local president, Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock and eight reports from department chairmen on the American home, American citizenship and international relations will be made Thursday's session and the greater part of Friday's will be devoted to other reports. The board members will be dinner guests Thursday of Miss Helen Norris Cumming at Alexandria.

Among those attending the session are the six national officers, including Mrs. Sherman, president; Mrs. Edward Franklin White, of Indianapolis, first vice president; Miss Florence Dill, of Pennsylvania, second vice president; Mrs. James E. Hayes, of Georgia, recording secretary; Mrs. Jean Allard Jeancon, of Denver, corresponding secretary; Miss Lida Halford, local director of general headquarters, and the state directors as follows: Mrs. Lewis A. THE GUMPS—THE MUDSLINGERS

Red Hair and Blue Sea

By Stanley R. Osborn.

SYNOPSIS

Palmyra Tree, on board the yacht Rainbow, which is leaving the California coast for the South seas, is startled to see a shark with a black suit on it thrust through her porthole window. Palmyra is loved by two men, John Thurston and Van Buren Rutger. She is not certain which she loves. Palmyra determines to unearth the owner of that sinister hand. She discovers Ponape Burke, who confesses he is a smuggler of coolies. Burke permits her a glimpse of a savage brown man, Olive, hiding with him. Palmyra gradually convinces herself she is in love with Van Buren Rutger. Burke and Olive leave the yacht at Honolulu, and Palmyra's engagement to Van Buren is announced. The yacht Rainbow is wrecked. The party lands on an uninhabited island. Burke appears on the Pigeon of Noah, and promises to rescue them. Palmyra goes on board alone to investigate, and finds herself a prisoner. Burke sails away with her, telling her that it was he who wrecked the Rainbow. Thurston and Van Buren start at dawn in vain pursuit. Burke grows ugly at Palmyra's refusal to listen to his loving, and leaves her alone on a deserted island with barely enough food to last until he shall return for her.

INSTALLMENT XLV.
A RACE FOR LIFE.

Olive did not waste time over the adventure of the shark. He had

If Olive chose death to defeat, so could she.

killed sharks before. Aside from the absence of his knife and the presence of a helpless female who might, in the excitement, fall overboard and drown, the affair had been commonplace.

Throwing the canoe into its course, he sailed on for the island. With every hour this mass had been taking form. Sharp and angular in outline, it rose abruptly from the ocean into the clouds. These appeared in particular to have been impaled, in passage, on two needle peaks, set close together at the island's center, and dominating it.

But now again when they were so close, Palmyra could see that the mountains were forested to their tops, could note where the plantations gave way to the bush, the Lupe-a-Noa came plowing down upon them. This time, however, the savage did not hide. The lesser risk lay in flight. He drove their cockpit until the girl felt it must go over. But she worked steadily with the bailer. As additional sail, she spread the gay parasol that Olive, beset by deadly circumstances, had always managed to save.

For an interval they went on thus, before it became evident Ponape Burke had made them out. Then the altering course of the schooner showed he meant to lay them aboard, either in recognition or for inspection.

They were paralleling the reef now, but at some distance. Nearest, was the long line of breakers that burst against this barrier surrounding the island. Beyond was a quarter mile strip of shallow water on top of the reef. Then there rose mangroves, backed by the coconut plantations and the beautiful green tapestry of the treetops on the mountain slopes.

But the girl had no thought for these. Burke was overhauling the canoe with sickening speed. She looked pitifully from the schooner to the face of her brown man. But it was still the same unrevealing mask. Did he know beyond question he could win to land, or was it that he had no hope at all?

She saw he looked frequently from the Pigeon of Noah to some point ahead. And presently he tried, with informative forefinger, to point out the reef opening they must gain to reach shore. The passage was still so far away she could not make it out, but she understood. If the white man, with his greater speed, could work in and head them off their capture would be easy.

Olive held his canoe doggedly to its course. For these three who fought out this grim race—life, death, or worse its cup—how brutal the thrust of emotion. A while there seemed hope the canoe might yet achieve. Gradually, however, the girl came to feel this could never be. She wrung her hands in anguish. To have risked, to have suffered, to have all but won!

She stared ahead with tear dimmed eyes. On the one side the Lupe-a-Noa was crowding them in. On the other, the long cruel line of the surf drew near. Soon there could be no course to sail between the two.

Presently the schooner was so close Palmyra could make out Ponape Burke on his deck, covering them with his glasses.

The reef wall was now so immediately at hand she could see that this rim, by reason of the coral broken off and packed down by the trample of the surf, was higher than the rest of the reef behind, the surface or reef table, which stretched inland to the beach. The barrier was armored in brown knobs of living coral, with their toothed faces like a giant nutmeg grater, against which the sea could grind the canoe into splinters.

From the top of a wave the girl would look beyond the surf to the protected shallow water on the reef. The next moment a sea would boil in, pause towering above the rim, crash down in an explosion that sent the spray sky high. And when the comber receded, the jagged coral, as if by its own animate motion, would rise ponderously out of the water, spouting brine; menace the canoe like the yawning jaws of some aged sea monster, with slimy yellowed fangs.

And now, as the girl looked, Olive dug his paddle in, put all his weight upon it. The craft veered and took a new course—straight for the reef. Palmyra sat stunned. She had hoped against hope that she was wrong, that he still saw a way. But here was surrender. Even for such a one there could be no further shift.

Scarcely had the canoe changed its course than the Pigeon of Noah also swung in toward the reef. Palmyra could see Ponape Burke waving his arms, shouting orders. She gave one shuddering glance at the caudron ahead, then back to the white man. The race was run.

And even now, in confirmation, Olive sprang up, let go the sheet, slashed the cords that held the mast; whipped the whole gear overboard. But immediately, to her bewilderment, he seized the paddle again, plunged it into the water, began to speed toward the barrier.

The roar of the surf—most frightful of sounds—deafened her. But as she clung desperately to her place, staring ahead into the tumult of waters—she could smile. If Olive chose death to defeat, so could she. But, such her faith, she felt that, impossible as it seemed, he must still think to escape.

Now, as her navigator began to calculate the seas, to hold the canoe at times, Palmyra saw there was a slight recession shoreward in the line of the reef. It swung in at this point just sufficiently to create a lee. The surf did not burst upon it with the direct drive of the wind, and, protected through most of the year from the sweep of the trades, not so much broken coral had been packed down here and the rim was lower. In a flash she perceived that he must have had this place in mind from the first; that the tide in their favor, it might be possible, in sufficiently skilled hands, to hurdle the reef.

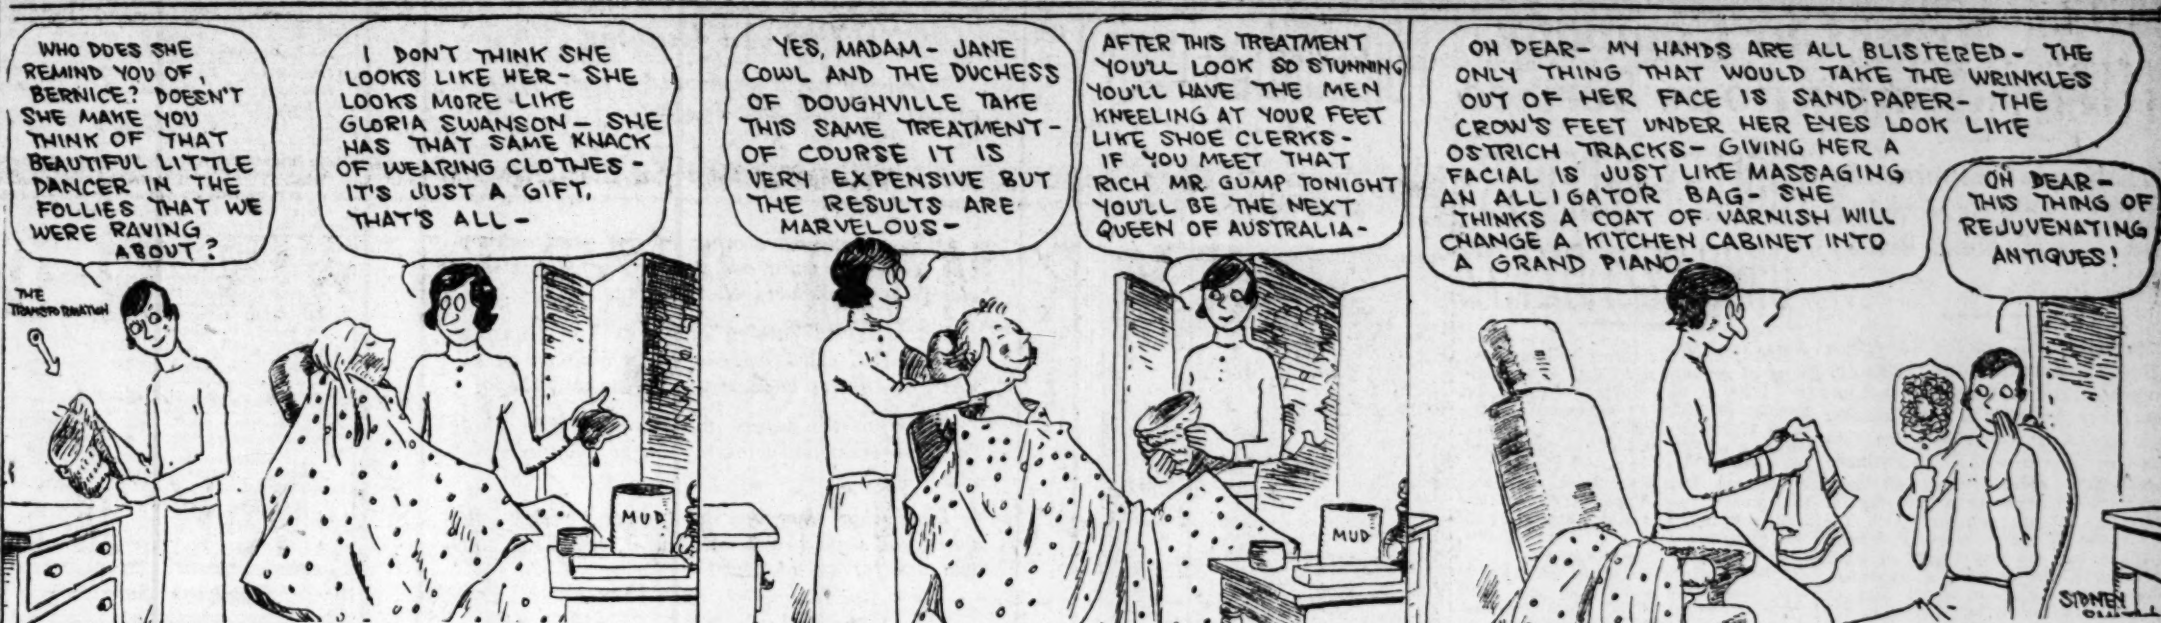

Giving battle to this new foe ahead, she forgot that asterisk. The brown navigator watched the waves with calculating eye. He was facing the one spot in all this coral wall where such an attempt could be made. He would paddle vigorously for a few strokes, then hold the canoe steady on the breast of the sea. He must be ready to carry over the rim at just the right time. To be an instant early, an instant late, would be fatal.

There was just one phase in the rhythm of the surf when he could succeed. He must catch the moment when the wave had crashed down upon the coral teeth; when the violence of the impact had abated, but not one second of the precious in-rush had been lost. For, if that had not carried him far enough, he would be caught by the recoil to follow, when the water flung upon the reef poured back into the ocean. And, above all, he must not reach the rim in the trough of a sea, or the next wave would hurl the canoe against the rock, grind them to death.

Olive, paddle poised, awaited the stroke. Then, as the next surge picked them up, he sent the canoe straight in with all his might. Almost under Palmyra's feet the wave exploded. Then the green water licked in, with a solid rush that carried them across the edge and upon the reef.

MAXIMILIAN J. JEWELL

MRS. JOSHUA
By Wallace M. Bayliss

The wives of famous men, 'tis sad to state, Have often had a hard and cruel fate. It always has been so, since time began; We'll illustrate by telling of the man Who followed Moses as first in command. None other than old Joshua, whose band Walked round and round the walls of Jericho. And knocked the city down in one fell blow! That military feat was quite enough To prove that Josh was strictly up to snuff. But one day, in a most important fight, He found he needed just a bit more light. No sooner was it thought than it was done, For he stood up and shouted: "Stop, oh, son!" B'gosh it stopped! It would be standing yet Had he not later cried: "Go on and set!" It's lucky he was not killed in that fight. Or we'd have daylight always, and no night. Your sympathy should go to Mrs. J. For night and morning, following that day She had to hear him tell about his feat, Explaining why it never could be beat And why she should be proud it was her man Who first devised a Daylight Saving Plan. AN INTERESTING EXPERIMENT Doris: "You remember the old problem of the irresistible force and the immovable body?" "Maxwell: "Yes." Doris: "Well, how about the conversation between a barber and his woman customer?"

THE ONLY EXCEPTION

Shepard: "My wife never sits in the back seat and tells me how to drive." Leslie: "I know—you have a coupe."

HOW TO WRITE JOKES

Seeing Jokes

Carry a note-book for the purpose of jotting down all of the funny things you see.

Example: while looking into a tailoring establishment you see a tailor sitting with his legs crossed. Begin thinking about tailor, clothes, sewing, needle, etc. "A tailor might be gentle yet his legs are cross." No, that won't do. "It takes nine tailors to make a man, yet one woman can unmake him." Not yet. Cross. That leads your thoughts to cross-words which is the present mania. "That tailor sits all day crossing his legs. Yes, and his wife sits all day crossing her words." And so you keep on jotting out your material. You get the point? Today jot down all the funny things you see. Go home and work them out as we have outlined above.

Marietta Has No Contract With Street Car Company For Continuous Service

Ordinance Eliminating Buses To Be Voted on by Council Next Friday Night.

Marietta, Ga., January 13.—(Special.)—The announcement made by President Preston Arkwright that unless jitney competition is eliminated from the Atlanta-Marietta line that street car service will be discontinued immediately, has been met with surprise here. The fact here is that Marietta has no contract with the street car company whereby service is guaranteed for any length of time. However, the ordinance is expressed here, that should the street cars be discontinued that a petition from the citizens of Marietta would immediately be filed with the Georgia public service commission, asking that the Atlanta & Northern railway be forced to continue the service to Marietta.

Whether Marietta will be served exclusively by cars of the Atlanta & Northern trolley line or also by jitneys, between Marietta and Atlanta will probably be settled next Friday night when an ordinance eliminating the jitneys will be voted on by council.

Proposed Ordinance.
The ordinance calls for the elimination of "all motor vehicle common carriers, charging a fare for transportation operating on Atlanta street in Marietta or any parallel street within 2,000 feet of Atlanta street."

The notice given to the Georgia public service commission that unless buses are eliminated on the Marietta line that street car service to Marietta would be discontinued at once brought this statement from Mayor Gordon Gann, of Marietta:

"I have no statement to make other than that the entire matter has been referred to our city attorneys, who will advise us whether such action as proposed in the ordinance is legal. I am not a lawyer and cannot say whether it is or is not. I am not a lawyer and cannot say whether it is or is not. I am not a lawyer and cannot say whether it is or is not."

Another feature of the ordinance proposed is whether it will prevent cars on the Dixie coach line, operating between Atlanta and Rome, passing through Marietta.

The jitney question became acute here in December when the hard surface road between Atlanta and Marietta was closed by the city of Marietta. Immediately a fleet of buses began to operate between the two cities. These buses are operated, it is said, by the Bryant Motor Bus company, of Atlanta. The street car fare on a "commutation" ticket is 13 cents each way; the straight fare is 35 cents. The bus fare is 35 cents and it is claimed that the street car company is carrying on a business of selling the books and ride for 13 cents, whereas the passenger paying full fare is patronizing the jitneys, instead of the street cars.

THREATEN TO DISCONTINUE SERVICE.
Officials of the Atlanta & Northern railway, a subsidiary of the Georgia Railway and Power company, filed notice with the public service commission Tuesday that the line will be discontinued if the interurban service between Atlanta and Marietta is not discontinued. The notice was filed with the commission by H. M. Atkinson, chairman of the board of directors of the Georgia Railway and Power company.

Mr. Arkwright told the commission that the company is losing $95,000 a year on this line and that since three motor buses have been making the same stops as the interurban cars the receipts of the company have decreased $202 a day.

TRAFFIC RECEIPTS DROPPED $221,021.72

Receipts of the street railway company of Atlanta decreased at the rate of $1,200 a day during the last six months of 1924 as compared to the same period in 1923, resulting in a total decrease of $221,021.72 for the period, the Georgia Railway and Power Co., announced Tuesday. Last year was the worst year the city has had since the company in its history according to the figures.

Following is the statement: "Decrease in street railway receipts in December were $27,706.63 less than for December 1923. For the last six months of 1924, street railway receipts showed a decrease in revenue totaling $221,021.72 as compared with the same period in the year before, an average of approximately $1,200 a day.

This brought to its end the worst year in the history of the Atlanta street railway. For the first six months of 1924, receipts were $9,072.40 less than for the first half of 1923. In view of the growth of the city, which normally would have caused an increase in street car riders, this decrease indicated an unhealthy condition in the street railway, but the enormous drop in receipts during the second half of the year can not be attributed to any one cause, but rather to a combination of factors.

The statement was authorized today at the white house that there is no substance to reports that the change in secretaries would lead to any modification of the foreign policy followed by Mr. Hughes in the state department.

The president does not foresee a change in American foreign policy as the result of the retirement of Secretary Hughes. The non-recognition policy towards Russia, always strongly advocated by Mr. Hughes, will remain unchanged so long as conditions remain as they are.

The president is hopeful that the Russian people will regain a point where they can resume their place among the nations but feels that developments of the last year have shown that progress to be disappointingly slow.

Officials would not discuss the considerations which are delaying an announcement regarding Ambassador Houghton, but insist that his availability for the London post have been exchanged between Washington and the embassy in Berlin, and early today word was received that the transfer would be satisfactory to Mr. Houghton.

Prepare Ouster Suit.
William R. Smith, assistant attorney general, spent the day preparing the petition to be filed in the state supreme court asking the ouster of Governor Nathan M. Davis in the closing days of his administration may be declared void if it is found they were obtained by fraud, it was announced by Attorney General C. B. Griffith.

ALANSON B. HOUGHTON.

Washington, January 13.—Unless there is a change in the present line, Ambassador Houghton at Berlin will succeed Frank B. Kellogg as ambassador to Germany.

Except for Secretary Hughes and Secretary Gore, who leaves the agriculture department March 4, to become governor of West Virginia, no changes are expected to take place at that date in the cabinet. Secretary Davis, at the request of President Coolidge, has withdrawn his resignation.

Means "At Home."
Elmer W. Jarnecke, indicted with Means, recently pleaded guilty and will be the chief witness for the prosecution.

When protest was made, Rosenblatt said they were told that it was "an honor to be indicted these days."
